A JUNE MORNING.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY GEORGE BIRDSEYE.

I weary of the hard, gray city-streets,
Where stone and mortar mount their endless stories;
My tired soul here no welcome vision meets,
But pines for country scenes and country glories.
Escaping from the city's prison-gates,
Here, in my cottage window, wreath'd with roses,
My spirit in new freedom meditates,
While Nature ever new delights discloses.

Once more I feel the dainty breath of June;
Again my heart-strings are in perfect tune,
And harmonize with Nature's voices sweet,
That, in their joyous songs, the dawning greet;
For country glories with the day begin,
And garden choirs now chant the morning in;
While zephyr, redolent with flower bloom,
On dainty wings brings Summer in my room.
The rare June days glad the sun-loving lark—
He knows that they are farther 'st 'twixt the dark;
As one sweet warbler to another calls,
The music fades and kindles, lifts and falls.
The river, gliding on its pathway calm,
In voice just heard, now sings a silvery psalm;
And the great trees, wide swaying with the breeze,
With heav'n-stretch'd arms chant forth their litanies.
The glowing scene takes up the grand refrain;
All things seem shining in the music-rain,
And rise the murmurs of the singing flow'rs,
That whisper softly matins to the hours;
While all around the garden-stars so fair
Twinkle their colors on the morning air.
In winding ways the sun-awaken'd rills
Run, carolling and laughing, down the hills,
And radiant islands seem to float and glow
Like water-lilies in the lake below.
Above the hills, o'erclimbed with vine and tree,
Luxuriant Nature's rich embroidery,
The long clouds, decked with blue and golden-fleeced,
Seem like the hanging-gardens of the East.
In sympathy my heart with Nature's shares,
And praises the Creator unawares,
Nature my only minister shall be
To preach my soul from self, O God! to Thee.

THE SPHINX SISTERS.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY JAMES WIGHT.

About a quarter of a century ago a young English lady, characterized by rosiest of cheek, redness of lip, brightness of eye, elasticity of tread, wholesomeness of heart and general buxomness of body and soul, who had "done" Mount Blanc and other Alpine peaks, stood with her single male escort and her dragoman a short distance to the eastward of the second Pyramid, contemplating the gigantic figure of the Sphinx—a monument more wondrous and more awful than all else in the land of Egypt. Her elderly companion, a relative and an Oxford don, thus discoursed, while the guides lay around smoking their chibouques:

"Though mutilated and defaced, the lonely and mysterious Sphinx still possesses, as you see, a strange and weird beauty. Comely the creature is, but the comeliness is not of this world. The once-worshipped beast is a monster and a deformity to this generation; yet Christian girls of the Coptic blood will still look on you with the sad, serious gaze, and kiss your charitable hand with the big, pouting lips of the Sphinx there. Hello! what's that?"

The young lady, who had been listening with almost painful attention, suddenly turned round and beheld a company of horsemen, enveloped in a cloud of dust, approaching their rendezvous at full speed. In an instant their dragomen mounted their camels and made off. Miss F.'s face was covered with the yashmak, according to Eastern usage; but at the moment when the foremost horseman almost reached her with his spear she rose to her full majestic height, pulled down her petticoat-looking veil, waved her arm aloft, and cried in a commanding voice "Avant!" The Arab steeds of the party of Bedouins suddenly were impelled by their swarthy riders to sit on their haunches.

Ejaculations—probably Arabic "bravos"—were uttered by all, and the sheikh dismounted and reverently approached the brave and stately Englishwoman, his flashing eyes full of surprise and admiration. The meeting, premeditated for plunder, ended in hospitality; and Miss F. sat by the sheikh's side in the position of honor. He was the handsomest and the most respectfully courteous man she had ever seen in her life, and her companion and herself sojourned with the party of Bedouins many days. When the final hour of parting came the Oxford don made a discovery as alarming as it was unexpected. His kinswoman had fallen overhead in love with Osmyn, the chivalrous and handsome sheikh. More than this, she had made up her mind to share her lover's fortunes and his shifting tent in the desert. The hour for parting between the two travelers came. Both felt that it was a solemn moment.

"More than likely we shall never meet again," she said.
"Farewell!" answered the other in a husky voice; and they departed on forever-diverging roads.

II.

Within a year from that parting there was a new thing in Egypt more wonderful than the Pyramids, or the Sphinx, or the Vocal Memnon on the Theban plain. In a luxurious tent, pitched where he had first met her, the Sheik Osmyn's wife had given birth to twins—to twins of the female sex, perfectly developed, yet linked together by nature in a common bond of existence. The extraordinary phenomenon which had rendered Siam forever notorious in 1811, by the birth of Chang and Eng, was repeated in Egypt in 1865 in an Arab's tent, watched over by the sad, tranquil, everlasting men of the Sphinx.

When the sheikh heard of the event he was filled with horror, and he rent his clothes and bent his head to the dust of the desert. To his mind it was an evidence of God and Mohammed's unappeasable anger. Clearly he had grievously sinned in taking the beautiful glaur to wife. For a whole day he fasted and prayed; then he mounted his steed, issued a command to his tribe, and they silently stole away towards the Red Sea; for Osmyn had resolved on a pilgrimage of expiation to Medina, and was about to sever his connection with his tribe.

Meanwhile the poor mother was left in a sore strait. Her female attendants were superstitious, and she was horrified with her helpless united twins. A profound silence reigned around. The women thought she was a witch, and watched every motion of her eye with dread, and when she fell asleep each seized what portable plunder they could and fled, leaving the mother and her infants alone in the desert.

Fortunately, a party of gentlemen, who had been exploring Northern Africa for curiosities in fauna and flora for the Paris Jardin des Plantes, came along, entered the tent, and promptly and skillfully cared for its sole inhabitants. The poor lady was very weak and almost at death's door; but she gradually rallied, and was able to comprehend the conversations of the Good Samaritans that had been thrown in her way. Naturally they spoke in French, a language which she perfectly understood. They were talking about the twin babies for exhibition purposes, and the sensation they would create in Paris and other capitals, under the designation of "The Sphinx Sisters."

"The Sphinx Sisters! O God!" she shrieked; and when the surgeon of the party examined her heart and pulse, he found that she was dead.

III.

The Sphinx Sisters took kindly to life, orphaned as they were, and when they were four years old they were brought to Paris and placed in a museum of living curiosities. At first they only stood up, walked and sang simple songs; but as they grew older they performed various feats in costume, and became adepts at a complicated zouave-drill. The one twin was named Zara, the other Zilla. Although they were like enough in physical for mand feature, they were more distinct in character. Both had lovely faces—neither English, nor Arab, nor Egyptian; but a remarkable combination of all three. It is hardly necessary to add that their temperament was warm or that their hair was dark—almost black. It is more difficult to indicate the difference in their characters. Suffice to say that Zara was resolute and dauntless as the lioness of the Libyan desert; while Zilla possessed more simplicity, warmer affections, and less power of resistance and of will. As the two stood up before their audiences when they were fourteen, the living tableau might not inappropriately have been designated "Strength Protecting Weakness."

Thus far Eugene Wehrendorf has not been introduced to the reader. Some six years older than the twins, he had been constantly associated with them since they were babes. Wehrendorf senior claimed what paternal right in the sisters could be derived from their capture.

Accurately enough foreseeing wealth in the possession of the twins, and sagaciously anticipating a period when natural and sexual development would prevent them from exhibiting themselves in zouave-drills and the like, Wehrendorf had sent his son Eugene to college to qualify himself as the lecturer for the united sisters. At the period to which we have arrived he was a young man of twenty, and could discourse fluently, if not profoundly, respecting the physiological union; the nature of the soft tissue composing the connecting band; the capillary insensations; the bonds of sympathy between them; the headaches to which both were subject; and so on. Besides lecturing, he was the schoolmaster of the Sphinx Sisters.

No wonder, then, that they thought him without equal among men, more especially as he was a big, bony, handsome fellow, full of daring, strength and skill in all many exercises. Now, however, he began to be their hero, with a difference. At his kiss, at his touch, the rich current of youth coursed like liquid lightning through their veins, and it soon became evident that their growing beauty claimed from him the madness roused in them. Zilla's loveliness became at this time the more conspicuous. It exhibited a new depth and richness, and reminded one of that statue whom love galvanized into life. Zara on her part well understood the change, and preoccupied though she was with the burning secret of her own life, she watched her sister closely. Soon she discovered that Zilla too was in love with Eugene.

Then there was an explosion, and the sisters fought like a pair of wild animals for the first time in their lives. Happily, Eugene was able to pacify them, and by something like an equitable division of carresses to assure them that he loved them alike—loved them both madly, distractedly, more than all the world beside.

"And you love us both the same, Eugene!" said Zara.
"Both the same," said he, kissing her. But Zilla threw her arms round his neck and said:

"It is impossible. You cannot love us both alike."
From that hour the twin-sisters knew no happiness. Each was wildly jealous of the other, and the silent prayer—soon to become noisy enough—of both was:

"Oh, if this hateful band were severed!"
They were nineteen, when one day after the exhibition and lecture Eugene said to them:

"Who do you think was among my audience this afternoon?"
"I don't know. Who was it?" Thus Zilla.

"Tell us!" quoth Zara.

"Professor Nelaton."

"Professor Nelaton? Who is he?" queried both.

"The most eminent surgeon living."

The twins said nothing; but when they were alone they made up their minds, after earnest consultation, to invite Nelaton to visit them with a view to an operation, if he should pronounce it safe.

Wehrendorf senior was frenzied with rage when he heard that Nelaton had reported favorably of the operation. He blustered about his rights and what not; but his blustering availed not. Both resolved to endure the ordeal. Both said:

"If we die, we die; if one of us dies and the other lives, perhaps it will be better; who knows?"

Nelaton performed the operation in the theatre of a private hospital, assisted by some of the leading members of the medical faculty. Before the chloroform was administered they both wept bitterly, and passionately embraced. Zara was the least demonstrative.

"If I die, Eugene, will —"
Here a fit of palsy prevented Zilla's further utterances.

The operation affected them unequally. Zilla soon recovered, while Zara lay for months between life and death. With the severance of the muscular bond all feeling of sympathy for her twin-sister seemed to have been exercised from Zilla's heart. Her first, her only thought, was of Eugene, and to him she straightway flew.

"How is Zara?" he asked, after the usual salutations.
"Oh, so changed! Lean as a skeleton, poor thing."
"Ah, well," said Eugene, "I never cared for your sister, but I love you as one loves the angels."

IV.

Three years after the events recorded in the last section, Mademoiselle Zara was an actress at the Gymnase Dramatique, then one of the most elegant and agreeable theatres of Paris. Miss Zara had made a great hit in the comedy of "Mercedet," known to the English speaking-stage as "The Game of Speculation;" and it seemed only a question of time for her to obtain admission to the more elevated stage of the Comedie Francaise.

All her aspirations, however, suddenly came to naught. One night after returning from the theatre she experienced a feeling of unusual depression. She was in perfect health. Her present standing and future prospects were excellent; yet she was miserable—most miserable. She tried to sleep in vain, nor could she rest in any place or position two minutes at a time. A spell seemed to be upon her. She could think of nothing but Zilla. She felt as if she was near her again, as in the less-conscious and happier days. By a strange coincidence, her right side, where she had been joined to her sister, pained her. She examined the cicatrized record of Nelaton's operation, and found it bleeding—bleeding for the first time in more than three years! What could it mean?

Feverish, anxious, restless, she wandered like a perturbed spirit from room to room all night. When the earliest beams of the rising sun saluted her window, she could have fallen on her knees and worshipped them like a Persian. She gazed on the glowing orb till her eyes were dazed; and when she turned away she became conscious of what she deemed an optical illusion. Plainly as possible, but in an ethereal, misty shape, she saw Zilla at her side, walking as she had walked, standing as she had stood in the past when they were joined together. But the face of the shade looked sad and sorrowful, and the index-finger of the right hand was pointed to heaven.

"My sister is dead! I know my darling Zilla is dead!" she cried in a wildly despairing voice, and fell swooning on the floor.

In this condition she was found by her maid, and restoratives applied. During the day she became more composed; but the glorified eidolon of her sister never left her side, even for an instant. "Was her sister dead?" "Would she forever haunt her in this ghostly form?" were the horrible questionings that arose in her mind.

What had she heard of her sister since they unceremoniously parted in the hospital?

Briefly this: She had married Eugene Wehrendorf, and they had proceeded on their wedding-tour to the Mediterranean and the East. During their absence Wehrendorf senior had died, and now Eugene was wealthy. She had written to her sister—had even sent her her professional portrait—but no response had been elicited. This was strange, very strange; for she had thought so much and so often about Zilla. Apparently, the sympathy had been all on one side.

Well, she would try to compose herself. There was nothing alarming in the misty form of her sister; and perhaps, after all, it was an optical illusion.

V.

"Eugene! My sister is dead! Speak! Tell me!"
"Alas, poor Zilla! She is with the angels! She died in Switzerland of an apoplectic fit a week since."

"A week since! Ah, it was true, then."
"She died at night, about twelve o'clock. With her last breath she bade me haste to you."

"Poor darling! poor darling!"
Thus Eugene Wehrendorf and his deceased wife's sister met.

In a very few hours they had ceased to discuss the dead Zilla. If the truth must be told, both were thinking more of the living Eros. The presence of Eugene awoke the long-dormant passion, and, once awake, that passion was like a giant refreshed by wine.

Zara resigned her position at the Gymnase Dramatique, and devoted herself to Eugene.

"Let us be married at once," he had urged.
"But it is so short a time since — people would talk."

"Remember, it was her wish."
"But, then, we cannot tell everybody that."

"We might go to Switzerland, and be married there."
"Perhaps that would be better; well, have your own way."

It was the night of their nuptials, and they were installed in an old chateau in the canton of Unterwalden. Zara had sought her room for a brief time, and when she again joined her husband she looked paler, although he did not notice it, and she assumed an air of unnatural vivacity, as she produced a bottle of champagne and said:

"I have been tipping all alone. Do you know, I always carry a bottle or two of wine in my trunks!"
She filled a glass, and he drank it.

"It has a bitterish taste," he remarked, smacking his lips.
"Yes; it possesses a tonic principle."

"A tonic principle! Heavens, I am poisoned!"
"Yes, you are poisoned by your own strychnia in your own wine; you are poisoned as you poisoned my twin-sister. I saw her a few minutes since."

"Saw her!" he gaspingly muttered; "God have mercy!"
"I saw her spirit, and she spoke to me. She told me you were a murderer, and she showed me your weapons. Villain! monster! and you would have turned my sister's death-bed into my bridal-bed. In this house she died, beneath the mountain there she sleeps."

The latter sentences had been uttered to a convulsively wriggling and unconscious man. The servants were summoned, and were informed that their master had drunk some wine which disagreed with him.

There was an investigation; but the facts were never discovered. Madame Wehrendorf, his widow, inherited his fortune, and spent the remainder of her life in seclusive wall-doing.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

No Replies by Mail or Telegraph.

QUESTIONS THAT DO NOT REACH THIS OFFICE UNTIL TUESDAY MORNING WILL NOT BE ANSWERED UNTIL THE FOLLOWING WEEK.

G. D. H. Sodus.—1. T. J. Sullivan, who formerly caught for the Dubuques, is now one of the catchers of the Buffalo Club. 2. Sullivan pitched in several games for the Rochester and Holyoke, and Sullivan played in the outfield for the last named club. 3. J. F. d'Hub Sullivan played first base for the Cincinnati and Worcester, and had the best fielding average last season. 4. Dennis Sullivan caught for the Lowell.

T. V. W.—1. If the ball was batted directly to the ground and bounded or rolled outside the foul lines, between home and first or home and third bases, it was foul; and if it rolled inside said foul lines it was fair. In such a case it does not make any difference whether the ball first touched fair or foul ground. 2. The base runner can be put out running on a foul after the ball has been returned to the pitcher.

A. K. K.—See THE CLIPPER ALMANAC for the fastest steamboat time between this city and Albany. 2. The J. B. Schuyler has never made any specially fast time, though by being forced she may have beaten boats that were not being forced. If the Chancey Hubbard or the Mary Powell were forced, either could beat the Schuyler about out of sight between here and Albany.

E. L. L. Buffalo.—B cannot win the second bet, as he himself handicapped it with the proviso that it should not stand in case the reported scores turned out to be incorrect. They so turned out. The statement does not raise the question whether the proviso was intended to govern the first bet also. The reported scores as to that were correct.

W. O. T. New Haven.—For reason we explained before, and have repeatedly explained since, THE CLIPPER about six months ago recommended that bets should be drawn that involved the question whether the Garfield or the Hancock ticket got the more votes last November.

C. W. Nelsonville.—There is no settled way of playing that point when "diamond" poker is played, and the game is not settled. It should be agreed on beforehand. Sometimes it is agreed to let the game as soon as one player is frozen, and at others the game goes on until one player has won all.

W. G. Chicago.—Your 2, 3, 4, 5 is not a hand at all at poker dice. Another dice is needed. 2. Unless otherwise stipulated, the lowest that can be turned at poker dice is an ace. This differs from card-poker, in which the ace rates as both highest and lowest. Deuces least ace at poker dice.

J. C. O.—1. Marrying sisters would not make the two gentlemen related to each other. In courtesy they could, however, be called brothers-in-law because the wife of each is the sister-in-law of the other. 2. Your handwriting may be called fair.

J. H. K. Brooklyn.—A natural-born citizen is either one who is born here or one who when born is the son of a citizen. The latter clause makes it possible though it is not always to be probable—for a person born abroad to be President of the United States.

STUBBIE, Detroit.—According to your statement, B. can be held to the bet. It is a question that would have to be decided by the referee. The referee would have to decide if the statement forwarded to us should have been made in full by both sides.

A. G. B. New Orleans.—No one point has precedence over another at case. The proper way to play the game is to play it as the "New Orleans" 2. No answers by mail. Paper will be mailed weekly for money sent.

LONDON, St. John.—With all our precautions, an "outsider" might have been there. These symptoms will appear in a minute in a while, but are in no way injurious. The best hands in the business are at a loss to account for it.

J. F. R.—1. It is a passed ball, and the base runner can make more than one base on it if he so desires. 2. The base runner is not out. He is obliged to return and touch his base only when a fair or a foul hit has been caught on the fly.

P. J. H. Concord.—Different kinds of clay vary in the shrinkage, and some bricks measure when burnt only 8 1/2 inches in length, while others measure almost 9 1/2 inches. The average dimensions, however, may be taken to be 9 1/2 by 3 1/2 in the work.

W. A. R. Detroit.—It will depend upon whom it is decided if; and no decision can possibly be called for until there shall be a tie, which cannot possibly occur, under the terms of the bet, until the end of the season.

A. J. W. Boston.—When it is agreed to play straight, it should also be agreed whether they are to play three of a kind, as in some cities, or only two pair, as in most card-circles.

K. Tacy.—Nothing can make a knockout when it has been specially or tacitly agreed to play it. Instead of being proper, jackpots are a mere variety of diversion of poker.

J. M. R. G. Little Falls.—We regret that we have not the space to give to give instructions as to how to play games. If there is a dispute, state it, and we shall endeavor to settle it.

STUBBIE, Montgomery.—Possibility is arbitrary. Those who have the privileges can change seventy-five per cent, or only one-half of one per cent, as they please.

READER.—He would have to make application by parent or guardian. In this State, application for change of name should be made to a Judge of the Supreme Court.

F. D. C. Concord.—We do not furnish rules of games or anything else except THE CLIPPER. If there is any dispute, and our decision is desired, we will give it.

K. K. A. Erie.—A dealer who turns his own card over at poker is obliged to take it. It is quite another matter when he turns some one else's card over.

KANSAS CITY.—We cannot tell from your statement which wins. You should get the other side of the game, and in making a full and correct statement. Seemingly, you win.

L. K. North Platte.—Haltmore had a baseball club in 1872 that contended for the championship. The League was not formed until 1876.

C. E. M.—John Farrell is the captain of the Providence Club. 2. According to our figures, Paul Hines had the best batting in League championship games during the season, and was the best player in the league.

F. H. C.—The first game between the Washingtons and Metropolitans at Washington, D. C., was played May 24, and resulted in a victory for the latter by 9 to 6. 2. See score by innings elsewhere.

W. H. F. Houston.—The cards falling 6, 5, 7, 5, there is a run for the 7 alone. Had the 6 fallen after the first 5, for example, there would have been two runs of three.

G. W. H. Holyoke.—In the case of a misdeal at seven-up it is optional with the eldest opponent of the misdealer to take the deal himself or make the dealer deal again.

W. J. McC.—Chester.—We have not the time to devote to solving arithmetical puzzles, more especially when, as in this case, they are simply tricks. You can buy books that will give you any puzzle.

THURTELL, Warsaw.—There have been instances of one player at whist taking all the tricks without the aid of his partner.

W. E.—It depends upon the view you take of the object. We should hold our flag as high as we can.

A. R. Buffalo.—The common interpretation of the language is to govern, and Bisto give up a hat for seventy-five cents.

P. M. Grand Rapids.—Except by special agreement to the contrary, five stakes beat five aces at poker dice.

NORWALK.—You can obtain the desired information by addressing the secretaries of the clubs in question.

MAY.—We would have to write to England to find out; but, probably, not more than three per cent.

H. T. Winchester.—Rowell was not a contestant in the race in London, Eng., for the Antley belt when it was won by O. Leary.

F. W. B. Denver.—The minority for the Garfield ticket in this State last November was a fraction over 7,000.

A. M. Akron.—You will find the fastest pacing time in THE CLIPPER ALMANAC.

NATICK, Mass.—The turned-up jack counts out at once. 2. The jack turned counts even when the cards run out.

J. A.—The Metropolitan Club of this city is not a member of the League.

F. C. P. Boston.—Low Jack goes out before high game at seven-up. N. and S. Penn.—Send your address, and we will mail terms.

LATEST NEWS BY TELEGRAPH TO THE CLIPPER.

Boston, May 30. Manager Schoeffel, in accordance with instructions by cable from Mr. Abbey, has secured Booth's Theatre, New York, and the Boston (Mass.) Theatre for October and December, to present some probably strong attractions engaged by Mr. Abbey abroad. Mrs. N. S. Mauran, the mother of Harry Bloodgood, Ethiopian comedian, died in Providence, R. I., May 29, aged seventy-five years.

Cincinnati, May 30. Henry Ward Beecher lectured at the Grand Opera-house to a small house. Collins' benefit at Heuck's had a good attendance. The Vine-street Variety Theatre had a fair house.

St. Louis, May 30. Julia Hunt and company in "Florine" opened to a light audience in the Olympic Theatre. Rochelle had an enthusiastic assemblage at Pope's Theatre. Urig's Cave was opened with R. E. J. Miles' Juvenile Opera Troupe.

Milwaukee, Wis., May 30. Haverly's European Mastodon Minstrels turned crowds away, notwithstanding the weather was very warm. The receipts are said to have exceeded one thousand dollars. The company leave June 4 for San Francisco, Cal.

Chicago, May 30. Forepaugh's Circus parade and opening performance attracted largely. A centre-pole fell on Sunday and killed a negro. The Acme "Olivette" Company at McVicker's, the Fifth-avenue "Olivette" at the Grand Opera-house, the San Francisco Minstrels at Hooley's, and Add Weaver's Celebrities at Sprague's Olympic had exceptionally good houses.

Hooley's Comedy Company is all engaged, save one. John Griscom, surrounded by watching physicians and Dr. Tanner, is fasting in the Olympic Theatre building.

San Francisco, May 30. Haverly's "Widow Bedott" Company is a great success at the California Theatre. Standing-room only has been nightly announced. Jarrett & Rice's "Fun on the Bristol" opened at Baldwin's Theatre to-night. There was only little enthusiasm, although they received a hearty reception. Snobaker's Majestics opened to-night in the Bush-street Theatre. There was little enthusiasm, and the performances did not equal expectations.

Bellefontaine, O., May 31. With the thermometer at ninety-eight degrees, Tony Denier's "Humpty Dumpty" Troupe last night attracted the largest audience ever in the Opera-house. Ex-president Hayes and Gov. Foster were among the audience.

Bradford, Pa., May 31. At the Gem Theatre last night the Ringlers, Lizzie Mulvey, Jennie Montague, and Redmond and Clifton disappointed, without explanation.

T. D. FENNER, whose portrait is given on our first page this week, was born in Providence, R. I., June 12, 1842, and made his first appearance in public there as a tenor-singer with the Providence Glee Club. He sang ballads with Shorey, Carle, Duprez & Green's Minstrels at Rocky Point, R. I., about 1860 or '61, after which he sang with an uncoerced face with a panorama of Ireland for four or five months. He next joined Chadwick & Webb's Minstrels, under the management of H. Farmlie, and made a tour of the New England Circuit.

After closing with them he joined Johnny Whiting's Minstrels, from 444 Broadway, this city (from which many of the troupe then traveling hailed). Among that company were Clash, banjoist, Master Tommy Ryan, Dick Ralph, Sheridan and Mack (then known as the Slitter Brothers), and Jim Carleton. He was with George Tillotson's Combination as tenor-balladist (white) part of the season of 1864-5. After this combination disbanded, in 1865, in Jamestown, N. Y., it was reorganized as a minstrel troupe, with John H. G. Shorey and "Pop" Reese on the ends, and Mr. Fenner as interlocutor. They gave their first performance in Corry, Pa., then a very thriving village, and played in a large room over a drygoods store. As it was the first minstrel troupe that had ever played there, they did a successful business for four months. After that season terminated Mr. Fenner returned to Providence, and when Cal Wagner's Minstrels came there he joined them as principal tenor. Sam Hague subsequently bought a half-interest in the troupe, which was thereafter known as Hague & Wagner's Pontoon Minstrels. Later Mr. Hague withdrew, and the company ceased to exist. PART IV.—LADY ROWENA BELLENDER.

"You must kill me or I will go, for you are no longer my husband. My name is Rowena Belleander. I have no other name. I am glad that your rage has made you reveal the truth. You have released me from my servitude forever. You are a prison from which I have escaped. Before the evening your curious manner of living aroused suspicions in my mind; but I always put them off by saying to myself that I might be mistaken. I was walking in the dark, but I did not want to stop. My love pleaded your innocence. I thrust suspicion on one side, would not believe in proofs that thrust themselves before me, and I preferred suffering and loving you to doubting your honor for a moment, to the horror of hating you, and to the certainty of your infamy. Poor, weak woman! I thank you for having opened my eyes. I no longer love you! I am calm and heartbroken at the same time. I am as peaceful and sad as a nun. I am going away from you. I am clear of you, clear of doubt, clear of complications that my love might have dragged me into, clear of evil forever. Do not attempt to stop me, except by taking my life. Besides, what could you do with me? Your vengeance must be sufficient, since you have dishonored the beauty of my love. I have suffered so much within these last few hours that I cannot suffer any more. I am no longer a person you can torture, and I might prove fatal to you. Rowena Belleander, knowing who you are, would not remain silent. Surely you don't think that she would now become your accomplice? Knowing all, and seeing everything, she would betray you. You have satisfied your vengeance, now look to your safety. Kill me, or let me leave this hotel. You can only save yourself in this way. As for myself, I should prefer death."

He had listened to her in deadly silence, and his fury burst forth afresh when he heard Rowena's threat. "You?" he hissed—"you? Dare to betray me? You, whom I have under my hand at the present moment?" "I should not hesitate between denouncing you and becoming your accomplice; and by remaining silent I should become your accomplice."

"You tempt the demon!" he cried, drawing his sword-cane.

As for Rowena, she did not flinch, but looked him steadily in the eyes.

"Curse you!" he hissed, poised the weapon preparatory to plunging it into her heart—"curse you!"

Three distinct knocks were heard at the door.

"What's the matter? Who wants me?" asked Armand, hastily concealing the weapon.

Cavagnol's round head was here thrust into the room, and his cunning little eyes gleamed with excitement as he said:

"I think that I have found the track of our man."

"Silence!" whispered the Baron. "Come with me."

Just as he was leaving the room, Rowena stepped up to him and said:

"You have not killed me. You were wrong not to do so."

She was alone. With closed eyes she leaned up against the wall of her room as if in pain. Not a tear! Not a groan! If she had been weak in love, she was strong in despair. She had humiliated herself in her love, she was upright and proud in the pride of her grief. Everything was at an end between her and her husband. An axe could not have cut a knot better than his disclosures had severed her from him. The past no longer existed. Her solitude should not be that of a widow, but of a young girl who suddenly awakens from a dream of married life.

What should she do now? Of course, she had resolved not to stay another hour in the hotel. She thought of the old house near Brighton, and of her grave-looking aunt, pale and noble, with her white hair and aristocratic manner. Not she would not return home. She would not approach the gates of the home of her forefathers like a beggar. Besides, it is a long way from Homburg to Belleander. Had she any money? No; nothing but a few coins that Armand de Sergine had left behind him, and they were not her own, since they belonged to him—or to those he had stolen them from. At this last thought she tore the diamond earrings from her ears with a look of disgust, and dashed them into a corner of the room.

Gradually the color returned to her cheeks, and hope once more entered her heart.

One day, while out for a walk alone, she had gazed long and thoughtfully at the flowing water of the river, and mentally recalled a number of tales in which the heroine had "with a wild cry rushed down to the river, and with one despairing glance," etc., etc.

Slowly and calmly she left the room, and in a few moments found herself in the deserted street. Like a shadow she passed on her way. She was no longer among the living, but existing in a thought beyond the limits of earthly barriers. She was not sure of the road she would follow, the river being at a certain distance from the town, and she had only been there once; but she felt that in the end she was sure to arrive where she wanted to go. Without a sigh and without a tear in her eyes, she slowly passed on her way. She seemed to be almost happy, and even allowed a sad smile to cross her face.

PART V.—PAPIOL'S MONEY.

CHAPTER I.

PAPIOL FALLS AMONG THE "BUSTED" FRATERNITY.

An honest action may profit a rogue; thanks to Rowena's scruples, Papiol managed to get clear of the Hotel d'Angleterre. So as not to call attention to his departure, and also from a sudden economical impulse, he neglected to settle his hotel-bill. The street was deserted, and, thanks to the care of "the army," who extinguished all the street-lamps a short time before midnight, plunged in complete darkness.

"Good," said Papiol to himself. "That Baron is a man who does not know what he's talking about. Not having managed to frighten me, he gives up his little game as a bad job."

He had half a mind to return to the hotel, and have a comfortable night's rest, for his courage had picked up wonderfully since he saw that he was not molested. But no! It is no good tempting fate! His fortune, that he felt in solid lumps about his person, warned him to be careful. Nothing makes a fox more careful than to have a hen between his jaws.

"Forward," he muttered; "show those fellows your heels, my boy."

Before leaving his room he had glanced at the little map in his guide-book, and had become aware that by walking towards the east for a couple of hours he would reach the frontier and no longer be in dread of the Homburg police, and, once over the frontier, the world was wide, and he had time to think about his future movements.

The first thing to do was to cross the frontier. He was hurrying along, though without appearing to be in haste; for it would have been imprudent to startle the inhabitants of Homburg by exhibiting too much haste. Though there were but very few people to be met in the streets, the lights glistening in several windows showed that all the inhabitants had not retired to rest. But when he had passed the last houses of the town, and had glanced carefully behind him so as to make certain that he was not followed, he started forward at a slow dog-trot, that he knew he could keep up for miles and

THE DERBY:

AT THE RACES A HUNDRED YEARS AGO.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY MARC COOK.

Come, all ye lovers of the turf,
Wherever ye do gather most,
If by Long Island's sounding surf,
Or on the far Pacific coast—
Come, all ye Fashion's sons and daughters
Who keep gay Saratoga up,
Because along with running waters
It yieldeth many a running cup:

Come now, and in the ancient garb ye
Expect will clothe ye ancient rhymes,
I'll tell ye of the ancient Derby
As it was run in ancient times.
But first, if you'd seem sage, and all that Accompanies the virtue herby,
Be very sure you do not call that,
By any slip of tongue, the Derby.

A hundred years or more have flown
Since the Earl of Derby found the race,
Which, now that he's under the turf, makes him
Wherever the turf has found a place.

To found a race by some may be thought
A task bespeaking a serious mind,
Yet our Earl was one of the jocular sort,
Who early to jockeys was much inclined.

And famous his race, when all of London
Went forth to see the horses run;
And some were done and some were undone,
But everybody swore 'twas fun!

No rig so old but what 'twas picked up—
And horses in those days could step some—
Lord, what a cloud of dust they kicked up
On every road that led to Epsom!

In coaches, 'busses, gigs and drags
All England crowded to the sport;
In silks and satins, or in rags,
From alley, prison, or from court.

The House of Parliament adjourned,
Affairs of state were forced to slay,
Until the Ministers returned
From Epsom, on a Derby Day!

Yet 'twas not simply horses racing
That gave its charm to Derby Day—
Its multifarious pleasures tracing,
One finds diversified as gay:

Oh, there was feasting and there was drinking,
And there was many a curious show,
And guineas clinking, and maids a-winking,
At the Derby a hundred years ago!

The caravan, with its living wonders,
Astonished the simple country swains;
The wild boar roared like the seven thunders,
The horns sent forth their liveliest strains;

And, released for the time from economy's fetter,
The rustic was willing the price to pay,
For when could he see the elephant better
Than at the races on Derby Day?

Richly the Downs of Epsom were salted
By lords and ladies of high degree,
While the winning jockey at one bound vaulted
To the topmost round of celebrity!
The Earl of Wharfedale Marquis of Whichester
A thousand rounds on Lord Thacker's bay—
And many were poorer and some were richer
At the close of the sport on Derby Day!

In booth and stall and tent and pavilion
Humanity surged in a seething surf,
While jockeys in blue and gold and vermilion
Sprang up like gay flowers bedecking the turf.
His lordship was brushed by his lordship's baker;
Big swells were overwhelmed by bigger;
The cockney found himself fleeced by the fakir—
The fakir was fleeced by the thimble-rigger!

Though some did make mistakes in staking
Their money on the losing horse,
They knew, at least, the beast was making
His level best upon the course:

For in those good old days, though checkered
By some proceedings out of place,
They did not look upon a "record"
As cause enough to throw a race!

And, though it seems a trifle funny,
The races then were lost or won,
Not by the merit of much money,
But by the manner they were run.

To some old-time ideas, as rocky
As Jordan's road, they clung like sin:
They held, for instance, that a jockey
Should drive a horse to make him win!

And those were days when the noble scions
Of British aristocracy showed
That the blood of the unicorn mixed with the lion's
In their veins still freely and purely flowed;

For they laughed as merrily over their losses
As if they had never a shilling to pay,
And just as glibly they talked of horses
At the close, as the dawn, of Derby Day!

Ah, well, though the wit of my song be barby,
And its shafts thus cleverly shot into rhymes,
It calls for a tear to think that the Derby
Will never be seen as it was in those times.

The good old race may be counted as famous
As ever it was through its hundred Mays,
But gone forever the days that shame us,
Because of their simple and rugged ways.

And gone is the company, genial and jolly,
Who plucked pleasure's plums from earth's pudding—
The rare, good fellows who gave melancholy
No possible chance in the race of life! (they wept some,
They loved some, they drank some, they laughed some,
Till, laughing and loving, they passed away—
Those jovial spirits that gathered at Epsom
To watch the races on Derby Day!

and women seemed to spring from the ground. He felt inclined to cry out:

"Who the devil are you?"

But the money rendered him timid, and he continued on his way with anxious heart.

Suppose that they were watching for him? They were evidently watching for somebody. In spite of their clothes, they might be robbers. Pretending not to notice the strange behavior, Papiol continued on his way, trying to deaden the sound of the gold with his hands, and taking care to walk in the middle of the road. Suddenly he said to himself:

"They are certainly watching me, and so I must make the best of it."

He glanced anxiously behind him. About thirty people were following him, and their number was being constantly increased, the people he had passed joining in the rear of the party following him. It was evident that they had been awaiting his arrival, and were slowly but surely surrounding him. What! Were they going to seize and search him? Rob him? Take his gold, his hard-earned fortune? So near freedom and wealth, and then to be dashed into poverty again! It would be folly to resist; one against thirty; he was sure to get the worst of the battle. What was he to do? Fly? Yes; but how? He was completely surrounded.

Suddenly he determined to make one great effort for his gold and liberty. Bounding forward like a deer, he soon distanced the people who had been following him, and dashed through the street, resolved to pass the frontier or perish in the attempt. About three hundred yards ahead of him he could dimly discern a post having blue and black bands painted upon it. With a cry of joy he recognized the frontier-mark, and redoubled his speed. He was within a few yards of it, when suddenly three men sprang up in front of him.

"Halt!" cried a rough voice.

"You cannot pass," said another.

And the third man murmured politely:

"I believe we have the honor of addressing the Marquis Papiol?"

Papiol did not answer. Gathering himself for a spring, he bounded into the air, and almost cleared the heads of the three men, when one of them caught him by the leg and dragged him to the ground. But the ex-clown had hardly touched the ground when he sprang up again, kicked one of the men into the ditch, knocked another down with a blow from his heavy fist, and, seizing the third by the body, hurled him over his head as if he had been a child.

Unluckily for Papiol, the delay had enabled his pursuers to catch up to him, and before he could resume his flight he was surrounded by a crowd of men, women and children, who caught hold of him by the arms, legs, body, hair, ears, nose and feet, and carried him off in triumph. Papiol hit, bit and kicked his best; tore dresses, coats, lace and petticoats; dragged off three or four chignons, and smashed four sets of false teeth; but all to no purpose. With shouts of triumph, the worthy members of the "busted" fraternity carried him into a house, up a flight of stairs, and deposited him in a dark room, while a number of invisible hands bound him hand and foot, thrust a pocket handkerchief into his mouth and fastened another over his mouth, thus preventing him from moving or crying out. He was then left alone, and the doors were doubly locked. Papiol felt as if he could tear himself to pieces with rage; and his eyes blazed like two red-hot coals as he heard the shouts of triumph that rang from one end of the village to the other.

CHAPTER II.

ARMAND HAS A BRIGHT IDEA.

The Baron had followed Cavagnol, trembling with passion, and yet pleased by the first glimmer of hope conveyed in his associate's communication. When he reached the bottom of the stairs he was almost himself again. He was still very pale, but no other sign of the terrible fit of rage that had shaken him remained upon his handsome face. He found Gaillonnet, Mons. Repluma, and Don Taddheus talking together in front of the hotel, while the five soldiers composing the army of the landgrave were "standing at ease" a short distance from the spot.

"Now let me know all about it," said the Baron, addressing Cavagnol; "have you tracked the Marquis?"

"I have," replied Cavagnol eagerly. "When you went upstairs, I followed you. When I saw that Papiol had disappeared, I felt that I could not be of any service to you, and so left the hotel to have a quiet smoke before going to bed."

"Very prudent on your part," grumbled the professor of gambling. "The rats desert the sinking ship. Don Taddheus and I remained in the hotel."

"Because you were too drunk to do anything else," retorted Cavagnol.

"Quite true," muttered Don Taddheus.

Seeing that the Baron was getting impatient, Cavagnol continued:

"As it was getting late, I was upon the point of retiring after half smoking my cigar, when I saw something shining upon the ground. I picked it up, and to my astonishment perceived that it was a gold frederick."

"Thunder!" muttered Don Taddheus.

"Lucky devil!" sighed Cavagnol; "poor little orphan."

"Instead of continuing on my way home, I turned back. A few steps more and I picked up another frederick; in short, I picked up fourteen fredericks in less than a hundred yards."

"My dear comrade!" murmured Don Taddheus.

"My son!" cried Repluma, wiping a tear from the end of his nose; "a regular orphan asylum."

The Baron seemed to be turning the matter over in his mind, for it was some time before he spoke.

"Where did you find the last frederick?" he said at last.

"On the Ober-Ursel road."

"Far from Homburg?"

"A few yards from the town."

"Good!" Gaillonnet, get your men ready. We are going to Ober-Ursel."

"Why?" asked the captain curiously.

"You will find out soon enough."

The army of the landgrave of Homburg resumed its march, but not without having heaved five sighs. The worthy fellows were quite unused to so much exertion.

The army led the van, closely followed by Captain Gaillonnet, Cavagnol, Don Taddheus, Professor Repluma and Armand de Sergine.

"What is your idea?" asked Gaillonnet.

"Why, a very simple one," replied the Baron; "a person who drops as much gold as our friend Cavagnol describes must have some in his pocket."

"Of course."

"I never lose any," sighed Don Taddheus.

"Well," continued the Baron, "Marquis Papiol, or rather the clown Aladin, has about ten thousand francs in gold upon him. Besides, a person who will sow gold on the highway must be very much preoccupied."

"As for me," cried Don Taddheus, "no preoccupation in the world."

"I don't doubt it. But allow me to continue. Now, it is very probable that Aladin was very much excited and preoccupied when he left the hotel."

"I'll admit that," said Captain Gaillonnet, "and also that our man has gone to Ober-Ursel. But I think that it is useless to follow him."

"Why?"

"Because Ober-Ursel is on the frontier, and Aladin must have a good start of us. When we get to Ober-Ursel he will already have crossed the frontier, and the army of the landgrave dare not enter the neighboring territories, for it would be considered a casus belli. Besides, I have to see the local police before I could arrest him."

"You are very methodical!" said the Baron sneeringly.

"I stick to the law."

"Quite right; but don't alarm yourself in the least. Aladin shall not cross the frontier—at least, not to-night—tomorrow you shall take him across yourself, with a pair of steel bracelets on his wrists. Mons. Repluma!"

"Baron?"

"Get me a sheet of writing-paper."

"Here's a marking-card. Will that do?"

"Yes, Don Taddheus!"

"Baron?"

"Your back, if you please."

"Here's the desk," replied the tall Spaniard, bending his shoulders so as to enable the Baron to write on his back.

When the note was finished, Armand gave it to Cavagnol, who started back to the town at a sharp run. The worthy French detective had watched Armand in a bewildered manner.

"I am sending a dispatch," said the Baron quietly.

"To Ober-Ursel?"

"Precisely."

"To whom?"

"To Baron Herzelius."

"What?"

"To Baron Herzelius, the founder of the 'busted' colony."

"The 'busted' colony?"

"Yes."

"Is there such a place?"

"Of course."

"At Ober-Ursel?"

"At Ober-Ursel."

"I'll make a note of that."

"I would, if I were you."

"And what did you say to him?"

"Listen: 'A young man will pass through Ober-Ursel. He calls himself the Marquis Papiol. Short, crisp hair. Looks like a Spaniard. He must not cross the frontier. You and yours must watch for, seize, secure, and confine this man. Do not search him. I will see you safe through the whole business. The Marquis is a French convict. I shall follow with an extradition warrant.'"

"Is that what you sent?"

"As near as I can remember it."

"And you think that you will be obeyed?"

"I am sure of it."

"And so the 'busted' people will arrest Aladin?"

"They will arrest him."

"Without searching him?"

"Without searching him."

Captain Gaillonnet reflected for a few minutes, and then said quietly:

"Between ourselves, who are you, Baron?"

"A discreet man," was the cold reply.

A few minutes later Cavagnol rejoined them, having sent the despatch.

In front of them the army advanced in silence, thinking mournfully of their comfortable guard-room, and mentally cursing the landgrave's service.

TO BE CONTINUED.

THE difference between a self-made man and a self-made woman is ten old papers, four hair-switches, ninety-eight hair-pins and a pretty little box labeled "Face Powder."

BASEBALL.

BUFFALO vs. TROY.

The opening championship contest between the above-named clubs took place May 25 at Buffalo, N. Y., when Lynch and Keefe occupied the pitcher's position for their respective clubs. The Buffalo bunched their hits in the fifth and seventh innings, scoring six runs, and by faultless fielding they prevented the Troys from making more than two runs, both being earned by good batting. The Troys fought well, but lost by being outfielded. White distinguished himself in batting by making five safe hits. Peters ably seconded his efforts with three safe hits, besides fielding admirably at short-stop. Conner's batting and Hankinson's sliding were the chief features of the Troys' playing. Score.

The Troys turned the tables on the Buffalos May 26, when they met again at Buffalo, N. Y. Lynch and Keefe were laid off, and Galvin and Welch pitched for their respective clubs. The game was closely contested up to the eighth inning, when errors by White and Rowe gave the Troys a start, and then they hit Galvin hard, securing five unearned runs. The Buffalos were unable to hit Welch except in the last three innings, when they scored three runs, one earned.

CHICAGO vs. PROVIDENCE.

The first championship game between the above-named clubs was played May 25 in Chicago, Ill., and was witnessed by about fifteen hundred people. The visitors substituted Mathews and Green for Radbourn and Gilligan. Flint commenced playing with the Chicago; but when he went to the bat for the first time a foul ball, hit by himself, laid open the bridge of his nose, and he was compelled to retire, Goldsmith taking his place. Both nines batted hard, especially the Providence, who, however, lost by bad fielding and a failure to bunch their hits.

The second Providence-Chicago game was played May 26 at Chicago, and was witnessed by fifteen hundred persons. Radbourn took Mathews' place as pitcher for the visitors, but was punished severely after the first three innings. Burns and Anson did some terrific batting, the former once clearing the bases by a two-bagger. Goldsmith pitched for the Chicago, and was also hit hard. Flint, with one eye nearly closed and his face covered with plaster, caught pluckily and well.

BUFFALO vs. WORCESTER.

The third game between the above-named clubs was played May 24 at Buffalo, N. Y., and was one of the most closely contested and exciting of the season. It was the second one played by the Worcesters this season in which twelve innings were necessary, and in both of their extra-innings games the score was the same, viz., 2 to 0. The Buffalos gained their first run on singles by Galvin and Foley and a wild throw by Irwin in the third inning. The Worcesters went to the front in the eighth, when they earned two runs on singles by Bushong and Dickerson and a two-bagger by Taylor. O'Rourke saved the game by a splendid running-catch that left two men on the bases, and also made the winning run in the twelfth, getting in on the third time on called balls, and being sent home after two were out, on Morrissey's two-bagger. Dickerson did the best batting. Morrissey reappeared at third base, and White caught for the first time for the Buffalos.

CHICAGO vs. BOSTON.

The Chicago defeated the Boston for the third time in succession May 24 at Chicago, Ill. The Boston were out in full strength, Morrell reappearing at first base. The game was stubbornly contested, but the Chicago won by bunching their hits in the third and fifth innings, when they earned four runs, a wild throw by Barnes and Morrill's muff yielding two additional runs to the home-team. The Boston earned two runs on Horning's hit over the left-field fence for a home-run, Richmond's single and Morrill's two-bagger, and got two more runs, aided by wild pitching and passed balls. Over 2,000 persons were present. Williamson excelled in batting and fielding for the winners. The umpiring was bad, and the Boston again got the worst of it.

JOHN FARRELL.

the captain and second-baseman of the Providence Club, whose portrait is above given, was born in Newark, N. J., about twenty-four years ago. His first appearance on the ball-field was made in 1875, when he played with the Union, an amateur organization of his native city. In the latter part of the same season he was connected with the Resolute of Elizabeth, N. J. His professional career commenced in 1876, when he was engaged by the Stars of Syracuse, N. Y., with whom he first came into notoriety. He remained with the Stars until their disbandment, in the latter part of 1879, when he joined the Providence Club, with whom he has since continued as second-baseman. Some of the most expert and brilliant fielding ever accomplished at second base has been performed by the subject of this sketch during the last six seasons. An instance of his wonderful play is recorded in the Star-Cincinnati game at Syracuse, N. Y., June 4, 1879. A seemingly safe hit was popped up to short center field; Farrell, while running backwards at full speed, lost his balance and fell flat on his back, and while lying in that position he just managed to secure the ball with his outstretched hand. Farrell has always played second base as a regular position. He is a sure catch, a quick and accurate thrower, and covers a great deal of ground. He ranks high as a batsman, is one of the most daring and expert base-runners in the profession, and always works hard and earnestly to win. At the commencement of the present season he was chosen captain of Providence's professional team, and has ably filled that onerous position.

WASHINGTON vs. METROPOLITAN.

The Metropolitan of this city visited Washington, D. C., last week, and played three games with the local professionals. The first took place May 24, when the visitors made a bad beginning, allowing the home-club to get in four runs on one hit. After that they settled down to business, and by fine fielding and hard hitting won handsomely. Say made the best hit, but in attempting to make a home-run on it he was retired at the plate. Smiley made his first appearance with the Washingtons.

The above result was reversed May 25, when these clubs again met at Washington. Leary took Daly's place as pitcher with the Metropolitan, and Troit reappeared as catcher of the Washingtons. Leary was pounded all over the field, Powell alone getting five safe hits, including a brace of three-baggers. The Mets were again benighted but for Reipschlag's miss, which let in two runs.

The Metropolitan managed to bunch their hits in the game with the Washingtons played May 26, and consequently won. Daly commenced pitching for the visitors, but was knocked out of position, and Leary, who relieved him, was also hit hard. Both nines fielded loosely. Powell again took the lead in batting.

DETROIT vs. BOSTON.

The Detroiters decisively defeated the Boston May 25, when they met for the first time at Detroit, Mich., before 1,300 people. The Boston put in Bond to pitch, Whitney's arm being lame, and he was badly punished. The Detroiters earned five runs in the first inning on singles by Wood, Hanlon, Derby and Houck, a three-bagger by Brown and a clean home-run by Bennett. Morrill then exchanged positions with Bond, getting the side out. In the second inning, Bond returned to his position, and pitched the remainder of the game, the home-nine getting four more runs on fourteen hits, including Brown's home-run hit over the left-field fence. Morrill split his finger again in the fourth inning, Whitney taking his place. The Boston made but three scattered hits off Derby's effective pitching, and only one reached second base. Houck, Brown, Hanlon and Wood batted terrifically.

The total time of the winner was 1:58.34. The distance traveled, 578 miles 60 yards, was 141hrs. Hughes' time for 566 miles 852 yards was 1:59.06. On June 29, 1880, was 14th, 24th, 30th, & Rowell's for 566 miles 814 yards finishing Nov. 6, 1880, 14th, 30th, & Hart's for 566 miles 165 yards finishing April 10, 1883, 14th, 24th, 30th. In this connection we must state that the record for one day and two hours was made by Hazel of Missouri last, at the same place, was beaten by Littlewood, who also eclipsed Hazel's three-hour record, made in April, 1879.

SCOTTISH-AMERICAN A. C. OF JERSEY CITY.
An assemblage of ladies and gentlemen numbering about five hundred was present at the second annual games of this club, held on Monday afternoon, May 30, on the club grounds, a Erie and Ninth streets, Jersey City, N. J. These grounds are quite spacious, and, although the accommodations for the spectators are not of first-class, the arrangements are such that all were afforded an opportunity of enjoying the sports. The weather was clear and very warm, although a gentle breeze blew quite steadily from the south-west, and in a measure tempered the in-the heat from the fireball above. The track was quite good, though somewhat dusty, and the management was prompt and efficient in consequence of which a lengthy programme was worked off in good season. A special attraction was offered in the shape of a prize race for the mile, which was won by a Scot in pedestrian circles entered, and, although all who sent in their names did not show, enough of excellent quality started to make a most interesting race. Price and Rain again came together, and for two thirds of the distance it was a good race between them; but Price, as before, carried too many guns for the Canadian flyer, who has certainly improved in distance-running, and when the thorough trimmer of the mile was fairly well advanced, he started with the little ex-champion of England, whose fine display of the art of running evoked hearty plaudits from the pleased spectators. Harry Armstrong and Fred Mott also gave a highly satisfactory exhibition of walking in the two-mile race, which both tried to win, and Mott did on the post; but the weather was too hot for men on foot of fix to do justice to their reputation, and the time was considerably below par. The American flyer started with the avowed intention of trying to make a best-on-record for four miles; but the task proved too great for him, and after walking a mile and three laps he abandoned the attempt. There was some good sprinting, the third and final heats of the "hundred" especially producing good races, the scratch-man, young Hilliard, being beaten by about a foot by Messmer, a one-yarder, who won the final by a couple of feet from Waldron, who was four yards start, in the final line of 10'; see. A return follows:

One-hundred yards run—First heat: W. S. Angless, S. A. A. C. J. C., 3 yards, walked over. Second heat: A. G. Waldron, Columbia C. C., 4, first, in 15 sec.; M. C. Johnson, S. A. A. C. of J. C., 1 second. Third heat: H. Messmer, Gramercy A. C., 1, first, in 10 sec.; Robt. Hilliard, S. A. A. C. of J. C., scratch, second, by about a foot; G. B. Hilton, Gramercy A. C., 1; H. Curtis, Acme A. C., 2; R. Hilliard, S. A. A. C. of J. C., 3, 3rd, in 10 sec. 1/2. The latter, who is 5 feet 11 inches, is a very promising runner, and will yet show a considerable better performance than he now has to his credit. Final heat: Messmer first, in 10 sec.; Waldron second, by nearly two feet.

Quarter-mile run—M. C. Johnson, S. A. A. C. of J. C., 5 yds., first, in 52 sec.; R. J. Berry, S. A. A. C. of J. C., scratch, second; H. Messmer, Gramercy A. C., scratch, 3rd. R. Hilliard, S. A. A. C. of J. C., 4, 4th, in 1 min. 10 sec.; G. B. Hilton, Gramercy A. C., 5th, in 1 min. 12 sec.; J. C. J., 6th, in 1 min. 14 sec.; O. H. Onslow, S. A. A. C. of J. C., 10; J. Feeney, Gramercy A. C., 12; P. W. Strappe, Gram. A. C., 15.

One-mile race—P. J. Berg, S. A. A. C. of J. C., 40 sec., first, in 58 sec.; R. Freyer, Acme C. C., 2, second; W. Boag, S. A. A. C. of J. C., scratch, third. The long-start man had away the best of this Boag not being able to get inside of 7m. 25s., which would have been a fine time.

Five-mile run, for those who never beat 3 min.—Joseph Hollister

Kopper, after going 2 miles, was overtaken by a scratcher, and Freyer, after going 2 miles, was overtaken by a scratcher. Freyer succeeded in overhauling his man—a heavy, pounding walker, with more strength and grit than ability—easily on the fifth lap, and then went away from him at pleasure, completing his first mile in 8:35. Hardie race, 220 yds.—P. J. Maus, Irish-American C. A. scratcher, first in 33½ s.; W. Logan, N. Y. City. Syds., second by three yards. M. C. Johnson, S. A. C. of J. C. scratcher; J. J. Hart, Jersey City.

One hundred-yards run—First heat: A. Waldron, Man. A. scratch, first, in 10 $\frac{3}{4}$ sec.; C. L. Jacquelin, N. Y. City, Syd.

Professional two-mile walk—Fred Mott, Harlem, N. Y., first, in 80

James R. Clark here started on an advertised attempt to beat Harry Armstrong's four-mile walking record, 29m. 40½s., but he weakened after traveling a mile and three laps, the heat being too searching.

Half-mile run, for members—P. Boag, 79½s., first, in 2m. 1½s.; V. Crowley, 25½s., second, by forty yards; R. Berry, scratch, 6; Wilks, 48.9; C. G. O'Connell, 49.9. The handicapper was at sea in his efforts here and virtually gave the race to the best of the boys who made. No one of the others was at any time at all dangerous.

J. J. O'Brien, P. A. C., 35, 0; A. Beckhert, P. A. C., 35, 0;

Smith, New Jersey, third, 28m. 45s; Philip Mignault, Boston, Massachusetts, fourth; Hayes fifth; George Irvine, Canada, stopped on fifth lap for a fall. Price was an immense favorite, took the lead from the start and was in the lead until the eighth lap when the pace maker, Raine on the second lap, was in the lead. The pace maker and Price ran close together for about half the distance and rapidly leaving the others; Smith, who is as game as ever, hanging on to third place after the first half mile. After three miles had been gone over Raine fell away badly, being quickly cut a half a lap in the rear of Price, who kept up a steady, telling pace, and continued to go away, and just before the conclusion of the third lap, Price, on the last mile he lapped Raine. Going along the track, Price was in the lead, and Raine was in the rear.

the turn and coming up the straightaway, he again lapped Smith before reaching the tape. The way in which this magnificent runner finished and the good appearance he presented at the close betokens excellence of condition; but he will be better yet when he meets McDonald in the match on June 18. Rain suffered from a bad foot, the skin of which had been broken during the race on Madison-square ground.

The field-officers were: Starter, W. J. T. judges at finish, A. R. Duseau, Harry, John Robison, and Mr. Howlett; judge of walking, Rudolph Wise; times, John Cove, W. G. Cunningham and J. J. P. S. scores, H. Curtis and Wm. Duff; marshal, J. P. S. S. referee, H. Curtis.

THE MILE-RECORD BEATEN.

The match between William Cummings of Paisley, Scotland, and William Duddle of Preston, Eng., in which the former staked $300 to $250, was decided at the Borough Grounds Preston, May 14. The track here is 603 yds around, and was rather soft. About four thousand spectators were present, and bets were made that 4m. 18s. would be beaten. The Sporting Life thus describes the race:

in 4m. 36 $\frac{5}{8}$ %: J. E. Sullivan, P. A. C., 65, second, by 10yd.
R. Craig, Adelphi A. C. 100, third by 10yds: E. I. Finney

They peeled simultaneously, and when ready to toe the mark had nothing on but very short trunks, such as Sheffield sprinters generally wear, the whole of their limbs being fully exposed. Both men certainly looked in splendid condition, and fit to run for kingdoms. Upon toeing the mark they appeared a trifle nervous. In the first particular, and when they set and were steady the pistol was fired. The runner started, but about thirty yards as if shot out of a gun, and the race levelled out. The runner, but in making the first turn Duddle led by half a yard, and the speed at which he was traveling it was evident he meant forcing the pace. They were never a yard apart throughout the first two laps.

Man. A. C., 15yds., first, in 28 $\frac{1}{4}$ s.; H. M. Stone, Man. A. C.

Cummings running a trifle wide, being just behind Duddle's lead shoulder all the way, but at the bottom end of the ground, about 30 yards from home, he made his effort. Three times he spurted up alongside Duddle, but got away a bit each time, but just before entering the turn into the stretch about 220 yards from the winning post Cummings got in front, and Duddle made one or two more good spurts, he was unable to improve on Cummings, who turned his head at least half a dozen times in the straight, finally cantered past the post a winner by eight yards amidst great excitement. The time for the first lap (603 yards) was 1m. 25.8s.; second (1,266 yards, 2m. 50s.; and for the final distance

CLOSING OF ENTRIES.

(dead heat by Lang and Richards) beat the best previous record, 4m. 17 $\frac{1}{2}$ s. It is certain, had he finished, all three would have been world and American records and a second faster. Cummings' easy victory and the fact that he achieved it with such ridiculous ease, caused a profusion of jokes to be made among the sporting fraternity present, for many of the old men thought it impossible for Lang and Richards' record ever to be beaten or, equally as it has stood so long, and it must be borne in mind that it occurred over fifteen years ago. Cummings has now beaten records of 1m. 50 $\frac{1}{2}$ s, 500 yds. one mile, and a mile and a half, and there is no doubt he can beat the world record whenever he is disposed to do so. Geo. W. Atkinson was the timekeeper.

NEW YORK ATHLETIC CLUB.

About seven hundred spectators, many of them ladies, attended the twelfth annual Spring meeting of the New York Athletic Club, held at their pleasantly situated grounds at Mott Haven, on Monday afternoon, May 30. Had it not been for the counter attractions of the afternoon, the racing season at Jerome Park and Coney Island, and the numerous other events incidental to Decoration-day, there would have been a much larger gathering. The weather was warm, although the extreme heat diffused by the sun's rays was lessened by a southwest breeze, the grounds were in good condition, and the management was tolerably efficient.

One-hundred-yard run, club championship—F. Jenkins Jr., first, in 15 1/2; George H. Taylor, second; R. H. Sayre, third.

One-hundred-yard run—First heat: G. R. Smith, American A. C., 2 1/2 yds., first, in 10 1/2; A. C. Cooper, Williamsburg A. C., 3 1/2, second; G. D. Smith, S. A. C., 7, third; H. T. Edson, New York City, 5 1/2, fourth. Second heat: H. T. Tobey, Will. A. C., 2 1/2, first, in 10 1/2; D. Duffie, New Brighton, S. L. 7 1/2, second; R. Combes, Columbia College, 5 1/2, third. Third heat: J. B. White, Man. A. C., 1 1/2, and F. A. Adams, Amer. A. C., 6 1/2, walked over. Fourth heat: E. J. Wendell, Harvard U. A. C., scratch, first, in 10 1/2; J. J. McKinnery, E. C. A. C., 4, second; E. H. Anderson, S. A. C. A. C., 6, third. Fifth heat: C. G. Wilson, Princeton College, first, in 10 1/2; F. M. Price, Will. A. C., second; Joseph F. Baker, Brooklyn A. C., 3 1/2, third. Sixth heat: W. H. Brown, Will. A. C., 6 1/2, and J. C. Wetmore, Elizabeth A. C., 7 1/2, walked over. Second round, first heat: Cooper, first, in 10 1/2; Tobey, second, Smith third. Second heat: White first, in 10 1/2; Duffie second, Adams third. Third heat: Wilson first, in 10 1/2; McKinnery second; Wendell did not run. Fourth heat: Price first, in 10 1/2; Powers second, Wetmore third. Final heat: White first, in 10 1/2; Price second, Wilson third.

Throwing the hammer—Wm. B. Curtis, N. Y. A. C., first, 88 ft. 1 1/2 in.; C. A. J. Queckbarn, S. A. C. A. C., 83 ft. 5 in.; F. L. Lambrecht, Pastime A. C., 82 ft. 5 in. Curtis and Queckbarn had both given notice of their intention to beat the best American amateur record, 88 ft. 3 1/2 in., by Queckbarn, but the former was the only one who came near the mark.

Individual throw—5 m. 11 ft. 5 in. Featherweights, 125 lb. First pull: J. W. Bond, Ent. N. Y. A. C., beat E. P. Conway, S. A. C. A. C., second pull: T. Owens, S. A. C. A. C., beat Oscar Bodelsen, N. Y. City, in 27 sec.; third pull: A. C. beat Oscar Bodelsen, N. Y. City, in 27 sec.; third pull: A. C. beat Oscar Bodelsen, N. Y. City, in 27 sec.; third pull: A. C. beat Oscar Bodelsen, N. Y. City, in 27 sec.

One-hundred-and-twenty-yard run—E. J. Wendell, Harvard U. A. C., first, in 12 1/2 sec.; J. B. White, Man. A. C., second; L. A. Stuart, H. A. C., stopped at 100 yards; H. J. Davidson Jr., Man. A. C., stopped at ten yards.

THE NEW ENGLAND HANDICAP.—On May 28 the 125 yds. handicap, for $30, $20 and $10, was run at West Lynn, Mass., the starters being F. McKinnery, E. C. A. C., 10, 1; Frank Homan, J. Gray, P. J. Noonan, E. Garrity, J. Smith, J. Casey, T. E. Coughlan, Thomas Murphy, W. Pratt, T. Rafferty, J. Knights, A. W. Latham. The first was a dead heat between McKinnery and Brown, the latter subsequently winning; Gray won the second heat, Garrity the third, Coughlan the fourth, and the fifth was a dead heat between Murphy and Rafferty, the latter ultimately winning. Pratt won the sixth heat. In the final heat, J. Gray won the race and took first money, Brown second and Garrity third. John Driscoll was referee. In a five-mile running-race for $10 and $5, Fenton, M. J. Happenny, D. J. Gorman and J. Young entered. Happenny took first and Gorman second money.

AMERICAN A. C.—On Saturday, May 28, the American Athletic Club held the first two events of a series of competitions intended to be the season's championship. The first was a 100 yds. race, the title to be won by general athlete of the club, on which a fine gold medal depends; the one making the greatest number of points (five to first, three to second and one to third) to be the winner. The 100 yds. run resulted as follows: Geo. W. Smith, first, in 11 sec.; Frank Adams, second; Robt. Stoll, third. Won by a yard, 18 inches separating second and third. In putting the shot, E. B. Baker, West, was first, 47 ft. 6 in.; Allen L. second, 26 ft.; Frank Adams, third, 24 ft. 9 in.

CHICAGO ATHLETIC CLUB.—Once more Chicago makes the experiment of organizing an athletic club. This time the honor of the attempt belongs wholly to the private enterprise of Prof. C. O. Duplessis of the Chicago Athenaeum Gymnasium. On May 28 eighteen gentlemen met on the Chicago Baseball Park (leased for certain days in the week), each with a membership ticket. Twenty-nine others, who have paid, were not there, owing, perhaps, to non-information of the opening day. Running, jumping, quoits, pole-leaping and a game of baseball constituted the opening exercises. The organization will in all probability be a success.

JOHN B. MCKEAN ASSOCIATION.—The annual festival and games of this club will be held at Sulzer's Harlem-river Park, Second Avenue and 126th street, on Wednesday, June 8. The following games will be contested, starting at two o'clock p. m.: Amateur quarter-mile and three-mile runs, and amateur one-mile walk, for gold and silver medals (entrance fee, fifty cents), and professional five-mile run, for $20 and $10 (entrance fee, two dollars). Entries to be made at 111 East Ninetieth street, or at Sulzer's Park on the day of the games.

THE MEMPHIS (TENN.) BICYCLE CLUB lately organized, and elected the following officers: E. L. Goldbaum, president; Joe Specht Jr., captain; Wm. Sager, sub-captain; E. L. Gultzman, secretary; Julius Frank, treasurer. Their first prize-race was run May 27 at the Shelby County Fair Association's exhibition, one-quarter mile, best two in three, and was won by Joe Specht on a heavy track.

MYRTLE ATHLETIC CLUB.—At the first regular meeting of this club (organized May 23 last), held on Wednesday evening, 25, the following officers were elected: Captain, Ed. Kennedy; assistant-captain, Walter Kelley; secretary, Geo. Keller; treasurer, John Kelley; sergeant-at-arms, Thos. Kirkpatrick. All communications should be addressed to secretary of the Myrtle Athletic Club, No. 84 Seventh avenue, New York City.

FRED KROHN, who has gained distinction by his performances in long-distance races, is now established in the liquidation business at 159 Christopher street, this city. The admirers of this plucky and reliable pedestrian are numerous enough to make the venture a success.

THE COLUMBIA COLLEGE Athletic Association last week elected the following officers: President, W. S. Sloan, '82; secretary, Stepping Rossett, '83; treasurer, J. F. Jenkins, '84. The Association will hold their Fall games on Saturday, Oct. 29.

MASSACHUSETTS INSTITUTE OF TECHNOLOGY ATHLETIC CLUB.

Several hundred friends of the students witnessed the two postponed games of this club, held May 30 at Beacon Park, Boston, Mass. A return follows:

One-hundred-yard dash—F. M. Haines, '84, first, in 10 1/2 sec.; J. Means, '82, Sp., second; Ed. M. Cheney, '84, third; R. T. Gibbons, '83, Sp., 4; G. H. Norris, '84, Sp., 5; F. H. Briggs, '84, 6; R. H. Hunt, '82, Sp., 7.

Throwing baseball—F. O. Harriman, '83, first, 300 ft.; F. M. Haines, '84, second, 273 ft.; H. S. Chase, '83, 0; E. F. Kelley, S. M. A., 0.

Bicycle race, 44 yds.—E. M. Bent, S. M. A., first, in 5 sec.; T. C. Du Pont, '84, second, in 5 1/2 sec.; A. L. Roth, '84, 3; G. T. Jarvis, '84, 4; J. Means, '82, Sp., 5.

Quarter-mile run—J. Means, '82, Sp., first, in 1 m. 3 1/2 s.; F. R. Richards, '83, second, the latter fell about ten feet from the finish.

Running high jump—G. H. Norris, '84, Sp., first, 160 1/2 in.; F. O. Harriman, '83, second, 160 1/2 in.; T. C. Du Pont, '84, 3; Ed. M. Cheney, '84, 4; E. T. Sturges, '84, 5; J. Means, '82, Sp., 6.

Officers: Starter, J. Duff Jr.; judges, E. A. Church and F. C. Darlington; timers, H. H. Cutler and A. Pratt; measurer, F. H. Briggs; referee, Geo. D. Bancroft.

MCCARTHY VS. MASSEY.—We have received from Noah Makinson and Arthur Chambers, respectively backers of Joseph Massey and Owen McCarthy (now matched to wrestle a catch as catch can match in Philadelphia, the sum of seventy-five dollars each, on account of said match. The first deposit, $25 a side, was posted at The Item office, and has not yet been paid to a side.

H. F. GULLY, one of the contestants in the fifteen-mile run at Madison-square Garden May 28, desires his friends to know that he did his utmost to win a prize in that contest, and that the cause of his stopping was that he was accidentally kicked on the shin by one of the other runners, and so severely hurt that he could not continue.

JO. "PARRY" easily won his seven-mile walking match with Joseph Bennett of L. J. Lyons, at Ashted, Pa., last week. The stakes were a hundred a side, and Bennett was left an eighth of a mile behind on the first mile, walked in 7 m. 34 s. "Parry" finished the full distance in 1 h. 4 m., and could have done it in far less time.

A 100-yard dash on a phone contest takes place at Elmira, N. Y., commencing June 7, at 8 p. m. The prizes are: First, $200; second, $100; third, $50. Among the entries are Daniel Burns and J. Cronin of Elmira, N. Y.; Thos. Cox, Orleans; Wm. Andrews, Oswego; and three unknown.

JOHN RAYNE, says an associated press dispatch from Ottawa, Ont., ran a mile at that place one day last week in 4 m. 28 s. We have written for particulars of a performance which, if correct, beats anything done before since in America.

THE WOMEN'S 60-YARD RACE, six days, at San Francisco, Cal., closed May 28, with the following mile race: Amy Howard, 304; Exilda Lachapelle, 333; Millie Young, 341; Bella Sherman, 330. It is said to have proven a financial failure.

Some pedestrian sport was at Mountain City Hall, Porterville, Pa., May 30, resulting as follows: Five-mile run—Wm. O'Brien, who covered 45 miles in 33 min. One-hour run—Chisnell covered eight miles 14-25ths, beating Quinn.

A HAND-BAUL MATCH between Ryan of Montreal and Peron of Chicago, Ill., was played at Montreal, on Monday, May 28. Ryan won two games in succession, which gave him the match.

McANALLY defeated Buck in a one-hour run at Ashted, Pa., May 28, covering 45 miles, and finishing a half-lap (eight to the mile) ahead.

GAMES TO BE PLAYED.

June 4, Girard vs. Germantown, at Philadelphia.

June 4, Staten Island vs. Chestnut Hill, at Staten Island.

June 4, Appleton vs. West Brighton, at Brooklyn.

June 4, Dorion vs. University of Pennsylvania, at Haverford.

THE LONGWOOD CLUB

of Boston, Mass., visited Philadelphia, Pa., last week for the purpose of playing the Germantown, Merion and Young America Clubs. The visitors presented a good team, including George Wright, their professional, but received three consecutive one-inning defeats. The opening game was with the Germantowns May 23 and 24, and was marked by the excellent batting of the Morgans.

The first eleven of the Keystone defeated the second eleven of the Girards by 67 to 65, the totals of the first inning. The second eleven of the Dorians defeated the second eleven of the Germantowns with eight wickets to spare, the respective totals being 54 and 27 to 44 and 36. The second eleven of the Dorians and Chester City combined to defeat the first eleven of the Dorians by 64 to 44. The game between the second eleven of the Merion and Belmont Clubs resulted in a draw. The Merions scored 184 in their first inning. C. E. Caldwell with 71 and G. S. Philler 40 being the chief contributors. The Belmonts had made 85 for the fall of eight wickets when time was called.

The Manhattan Club of this city visited Philadelphia on Decoration-day, and easily defeated the Girard Club. The home-team were short the services of Jarvis and MacNutt, two of their best players. The game was decided by the score at the end of the first inning, the Girards having lost seven wickets for 32 runs in their second inning. Captain White batted in fine form for 30, and Smith scored 17, besides doing the best bowling. Brooks' 18 was the highest score made by the Girards.

A GLASS-BALL MATCH for $250 a side, eighteen yards rise, fifty shots per man, was decided at Springfield, Mass., May 24, W. Simmons and Harry Nichols defeating G. H. Worn and J. F. Harrison by a score of 100 to 74.

H. T. Stow of the Pacific Rifle Club, on Saturday, May 14, during practice at the Presidio Range, San Francisco, Cal., made a score of 94 out of a possible 100.

PHILO JACORY won the return rifle match between him and Capt. McElhenry, 100 shots each, 200 yds., at San Francisco, Cal., recently.

THE LEROUX was competed for by eighteen well-known riflemen at Creedmoor, L. I., May 30, and was won by L. C. Bruce, with scores of 73, 72 and 71 at the respective ranges of 300, 400 and 500 yards, his total 217 being said to be the best individual score, under all the conditions, ever made at Creedmoor. The cup was presented during the first visit of the Irish team to this country, in 1874, by Major Leech, its captain, and the Amateur Rifle Club, in whose possession it was left, made it the emblem of the individual long-range championship, the winner to hold it for a year and receive as a permanent gift a gold medal valued at $50. It is shot for each year at 300, 400 and 500 yards, 15 shots at each range being allowed, making 225 the possible total of points.

THE ALL-CONGRESS MATCH, 200 yds., seven rounds per man, two best scores to count, was shot at Creedmoor, L. I., May 28, the highest possible score being 70 points, and the prize winners as follow: J. L. Faudling, 60; E. S. Brown, 60; G. S. Harrington, 60; P. J. Donaldson, 50; F. F. Miller, 50; C. E. Taylor, 58; F. Adler, 58; J. J. Dixon, 58; Henry Holmes, 56; H. S. Farrell, 56; G. F. Clark, who scored 216 out of a possible 225.

THE HARRON TROPHY was competed for at Bergen Point, N. J., May 28, a half dozen contestants shooting at ten birds each from five ground-traps, hind-swing rise, shots, fall, with this result: White head, 3 yds., nine; Hunter, 20, eight; Armstrong, 30, seven; Long, 28, seven; Benjamin, 28, six. In sweepstakes shooting which followed, Whitehead and Smith each won once, and Whitehead and Hamilton divided another. Referee, T. J. Dolan.

In a rifle tournament at Milwaukee, Wis., May 27, between teams from that place, Chicago and Minneapolis, 300, 300 and 1,000 yards, the Milwaukee team won, with a score of 1,216 points, to Minneapolis, 1,133 and Chicago, 1,122. At 300 yds. the Milwaukee team made 429 out of a possible 450.

THE RING.

JOHN L. SULLIVAN, BOXER.

Herewith we present the first portrait that has ever been published of this rising young Boston "Knight of the Fives," who recently got away so easily with Flood.

A RING fight for fifty dollars took place May 11 about six miles from London, Eng., the participants being Jim Brock and H. Harnaty, alias "Navy." The former was seconded by Pat Parry and Punch Callow, while Barney Sheppard and Tom Hooper looked after Harnaty.

THE FIGHT.

Round 1. The Clerkenwell lad shaped in his usual determined style, with his head well back, whilst Harnaty also stood well up, but his hands were somewhat lower than Brock's. No time was lost, as the big "bo" let fly with both hands the left on the cheek and right on the jaw. Brock countered him heavily, and got his right well home on the ribs, which brought on a rare rally, after which Harnaty closed with his man, and, being much the stronger of the pair, threw Brock and fell heavily on him.

2 Both were sharp to the call of "Time." Brock opened proceedings by getting a light one in; but the Fulham man rushed in, and after one or two smart exchanges got hold of Brock and cross-butted him heavily.

3 Brock again fell off, this time on the nose, and received a stinger on the right eye, which caused the rally to flow. First blood was claimed and allowed for Harnaty. They were seen at it again, and some sharp work ensued; but Brock stood no chance with his burly antagonist in the throw, as he was underneath once more in the fall.

4 It was evident that Brock was greatly overmatched, but he was up very promptly to the call of "Time," and the lads were hard at work before you could say "Jack Robinson." Some excellent fighting took place, out of which Brock came off best, and he would have been ground by grassing his burly antagonist, which brought forth great cheering from his small party.

5 Brock again fell off, and in endeavoring to get out of harm's way fell. Harnaty rushed forward and stood over him, and, as he thought

ATHLETIC.

ELIZABETH ATHLETIC CLUB.

Threatening weather lessened the usual large attendance at the Spring meeting of this New Jersey club, held May 21. The track was in very poor condition, and the performances were not of a character to call for comment. Return:

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

37-QUESTIONS THAT DO NOT REACH THIS OFFICE UNTIL TUESDAY MORNING WILL NOT BE ANSWERED UNTIL THE FOLLOWING WEEK.

ST. LOUIS.—This column is not for the purpose of furnishing the whereabouts of professionals. When they are performing, their movements are recorded in our amusement columns; when they are not performing, their addresses are private, so far as we are concerned. Any letters sent to THE CLIPPER Post-office will be advertised gratuitously.

J. C. S. Erie.—We cannot at this late date, without going to considerable trouble and writing to Pittsburgh, Pa., give the names of all the females who appeared in that or any other play that did not have its first production at the time spoken of. If you are seeking anyone in particular, be specific.

Mrs. R. Baltimore.—I. You should apply to the stage-door of some novelty theatre in your city. There you can also ascertain about what such a person would probably command. We cannot say with-out seeing him. 2. We know nothing of him, so far as we can now say.

AN OLD ACTOR, Louisville.—L. Lotta very frequently goes to Europe during the summer seasons. 2. Maggie Mitchell almost invariably passes the summer at her cottage at Long Branch, N. J. 3. She did not send for it, and the season being over, it is not likely to. R. H. Wilmington.—1. Wirewalkers get from $25 per week upwards. 2. A card of the size you mark it will cost four dollars for each insertion.

INQUIRY.—As you, yourself, are in doubt about her name, we cannot be sure as to who it is that you mean. You should have described her professional business.

GO NOT, MY LOVE.—DUET.

INTRODUCTORY.

TUESDAY, May 31, '81.

CRITERION.—1. The original Steerforth in "David Copperfield" in this city was Lester Wallack, at Burton's Chambers-street Theatre, Dec. 30, 1880. 2. He first played there Sept. 3, 1880.

D. M. Calala.—Little Rosebud is the daughter of a lady who for many years lived in Washington, D. C., and whose surname is as you put it.

W. R. Sacramento.—We were to answer those questions, other than to say that both are matters of individual opinion, we should have a horse's nest about our ears.

F. W. H. Kalamazoo.—J. L. Boyd of Columbus, Ga., writes that he can accommodate you with a copy of those verses.

CHAMBERS, St. Louis.—We do not know where you can get a copy of those humorous stories.

G. T. B. Boston.—Whittemore & Clark's Minstrels closed their season a number of weeks ago.

NEWARK.—You will find "The Seven Ages of Man" described in Shakespeare's comedy of "As You Like It."

D. M. Brooklyn.—If you have any dispute as to someone's being in the cast, name the person. We have no space to spare to print casts.

PERSIMO, Chicago.—A win. "The Shaughraun" was first produced more than five years ago.

F. M. H. Joliet.—"Hazel Kirke" has had a longer run than any other play in this city.

A. H. E. Omaha.—Double somersaults have frequently been turned over elephants and other animals.

H. N. M. Jersey City.—We cannot spare the space for such biographical and critical matters.

C. M.—John Rogan, 23 E. Twenty-second street, you will find a capable instructor in clog and jig dancing.

H. M. Washington.—We prefer not to give the ages of professionals, more especially ladies.

C. & Y. Dover.—Violetta Colville gave concerts in conjunction with P. S. Gilman's Band in the latter part of 1874.

W. H. M. Theodore & Nims played at Barnum's Museum, this city, in 1887.

F. F. R. Baltimore.—A French & Son publish many plays.

F. H. F. Chicago.—Have no idea where he is.

S. B. Dallas.—We cannot say.

last resting-places with the blushing flowers of June. And as the multitude passed from mound to mound a mother's moan could be heard, while a sister's sigh and the lonely wife's lamentation broke the stillness of the occasion, and the tears of the mourners bedewed the turf hiding from view all that was left of mortality. The graves of our soldier-actors were not forgotten by their relatives and friends, and loving hearts and kindly hands were not wanting to decorate with floral tributes the narrow house not made with hands. The scene was solemnly and realistically dramatic, and in vain sought to keep back the scalding tear as memories of the past were recalled, and the loves of the long-ago were revived amid the queenliest of roses and the tenderest of violets and daisies, that made a blooming Paradise of the char-nel-house of the dead, for

There's a flower that bloomed in Eden
Which shall still bloom forever
Through the Summer and the Winter,
Through the sunshine and the gloom,
It sprang anew that May-day morning—
As the mourners walked together—
Just as fair as when the dawning
First saw it in its bloom.

This is the state of man!... But what shall we say of the state of woman? Alas! we can say but little of her habits as she ministers to the passions of love and lust, and the jollity Catherine Lewis, for instance. Said she to her manager the other day: "I am not satisfied with conquering a city—I must have an entire State." "What d'yer say?" responded the appalled manager. Said she: "Don't be frightened; I only want a new Jersey!"... Considering the calamity and great loss of life attending the excursion of the Victoria at London, Ontario, isn't it singular that the night steamboat explosion at Wallack's were put a stop to before the whole house and its human freight are blown to pieces? What are the Fire-commissioners a-doing?... Art is unconfined, and the genial song-and-dance man who receives half a dozen recalls every night cannot legally claim the right of recognition as the sole representative of the artist in his science. A gentleman, in fame and fortune heretofore unknown, has just come to the front, and publicly advertises himself as "the artist in planked shad." "Our Jim" will probably be heard from next, urging his claim as a "scientific vivisector of frogs' legs!"... What's the matter with Gilmore? Why doesn't he introduce his latest work to the notice of the patrons of the beer-garden where he plays? Give the beer-drinkers a chance to hail "Columbia!"... Perhaps no clerk or peddler values the truth so reverently as do the circus profession. In all our long acquaintance with this section of our fellow-citizens we do not remember to have detected a single member of the sawdust arena in a falsehood; they shun the very semblance of deceit and duplicity. They declare the late Ananias to have been the wickedest man the world ever produced. And why? Because Ananias was a professional liar and a Noah-maker. When Ananias undertook the management of the first circus and menagerie that took the road, he invented more lies about that show than you would believe it possible for one man to originate and put into circulation. To show you how reckless and unprincipled he was, we may mention the fact that he got out half a million of gutter-snipes on which all the country people had their eyes fixed, and which he composed of the principal members of the great floating circus and menagerie known as Noah's Ark, a moral exhibition of all nations, possessing the finest clowns and the most skillful riders ever exhibited under one canvas. We have secured this great galaxy of talent at enormous cost, and have old Noah's receipt for the same. These gutter-snipes he posted on all the country roads, and the result was that the country people turned out in millions to see the old man Noah's great moral circus and moving collection of wild animals, that lived for forty days and forty nights on water! Pure lies! And when the good-natured and confiding country people asked if Mister Noah would enter the ring and favor them with a few remarks concerning his floating palace show, this Ananias would get up on a four-barrel in the centre of the ring and actually proclaim himself to be Noah's Ark! Next day all the country papers would be filled with reports of the marvelous show and Noah's speech. And he would issue great colored posters stating that thousands were turned away unable to gain admittance, owing to the crowded condition of the audience-chamber; that his twelve-centre-pole canvas was entirely too small, and that he had sent to New York to order a new one; that his monster combination had driven all other concerns from the road, and made 'em sick as a dog. He advertised in all the theatrical papers that he had the only living skeleton that ever lived; that those advertised by other shows were frauds, and merely stuffed skeletons. You never knew a man to lie so. But we digress. This Ananias came a long way after Noah and his floating ark, and he was a sinful man to ask us to believe that he bought the old man's entire aggregation is taxing our credulity a little too far. How different are the circuses and menageries and sidewalk shows of the current era! There's not a person connected with our traveling tent exhibitions that would not scorn to tell a lie, or to act a list. You never hear of these daring chaps that they turn people away. No, indeed; they always advertise the truth, and intimate, in no matter how large the business they are doing, that they still have room for a few more left! Why, truth dwelleth in every feature! From the proprietor down to the humblest canvasser, there is an air of truthfulness and piety about them that defies competition; and they love one another with that perfect love which surpasseth all understanding. Should two concerns accidentally happen to strike a town, no inflammatory landscape illustrations anywhere, as in the time of the malicious and defamatory Ananias! But all is contentment and peace. There is no rivalry nowadays—one show will wander far off from the byway to let another pass. And furthermore, for their credit be it said that if one gigantic concern possesses two living skeletons and the other none, owing to death, the former conceals one of its existing skeletons to the other with its kindest regards. Isn't such conduct beautifully suggestive of that all-enduring love which bindeth closer than a brother? Oh, it is precious in the eyes of a wondering world. When one hundred elephants are advertised, and one of that hundred should perish, rather than have the programme falsified the show just ahead will kindly send one of its elephants until a fresh remittance comes from India. We look forward to the day when every circus proprietor shall become a superintendent of Sabbath schools, and every performer a teacher in the sanctuary; when every groom and every animal-feeder shall be a shining light among their fellow-men, and an example of piety and goodness to the wicked in every land, for truth is mighty and must prevail. But neither Ananias, nor old man Noah, nor any of their progeny ever possessed such a far-sighted and noble animal as the one we are talking about. It was an elephant—not a baby, but a full-sized pachydermatous mammal. We have told you about it before, but you have, in your blindness, forgotten all about it. This educated elephant was traveling on the Western circuit—everything happens out West nowadays—and he was riding in a railroad car, as you are aware. Suddenly he conceived the brilliant idea that it was lunch-time and he would stop the locomotive. Now, his special car was next to the engine, and what did he do? Simply stretched out his trunk, drank all the water out of the tender, and of course thus stopped the train. That was because he was a professional elephant, and for his activeness here is a rhyme on

THE ELEPHANT AND HIS TRUNK.

See the knowing elephant

As he complaisantly suds!

He does not say "A feller can't,"

Nor troubleth yet his friends;

But, wishing that the train would stop

(A reasonable desire),

He drank the water, drop by drop,

And quenched the engine's fire.

He thus displayed intelligence

As omnisciently clever,

And showed, forthwith, that elephants

"Can do what man has never!"

For trunks by railroads, while unworked,

Are checked until they've shrunk;

But who before has ever checked

A railroad with a trunk!

...It must not be imagined that those ladies at Coney Island and who wear a scanty supply of bathing-suits are burlesque-actresses. Ah, no; such ladies are in many instances the wives and daughters of our best people. Actresses do not exhibit their charms to the rude gaze of the populace at seaside resorts, where the improper study of man is woman.

...Tankhannock, in the Keystone State, is a good show town, and the good people of that burg take to the circus like a hungry leech takes to gore. Last week the excitement was intense when it became known that a Decoration-day parade and a circus street-exhibition would take place at the same hour on May 30. Kerosene-oil was thrown upon the troubled waters by the circus people, who kindly offered to escort the other procession to the cemetery, and remain with them long enough to see that the graves were kept green. In appreciation of this evidence of Christian forbearance and brotherly love on the part of the circus people, the Sunday-schools, and oddfellows, and dorchas societies, and Young Men's Christian Associations, and soup societies all turned out in their might, and filled the circus-canvas as it was never filled before. And to the greater credit of Tunkhannock, it is with a happy heart that we can state truthfully and above board that not a thing was stolen from the show while it remained in town, and not one small boy attempted to crawl in under the canvas. Three cheers for Tunkhannock and a tiger for the circus!... Campaigning volunteered for a charity concert; and some of his selfish friends said he thus threw away five hundred dollars; but no sane person will pronounce Camp a ninny for doing such a charitable action. Poor Max Strakosch has thrown up the sponge, and thereby acknowledged that he is a beaten man. Last week he issued a good many notes which were not remunerative at maturity; so he has made an assignment, a sign meant to admonish creditors that time tries all men, and that "procrastination is the thief of time."... Oh, the pity of it! A number of actors now prevalent in this city played a game of cricket with a St. George eleven last Thursday, and a more demoralized set of actors you never saw. Our cricket reporter tells the story of their defeat. Had our Thespian friends used the stuffed club—with which they are better acquainted—instead of the regulation stick, a better performance might have been the result. We are glad to be able to record the safe return of the Lingers after their travels in many lands. With the kind permission of the indulgent reader, we propose to invent a strain or two of poetry on the subject of

LILYARDIANA.

William and Alice have returned—
Too long away their lights have burned—
"Will" brought his daughters, as he ought,
But William son he has not brought.
[Our Jim says he could do more effect to joke than that.]
...Commodore Nutt has cracked his joke, and no sound can awake him to show here again. He passed away with the outgoing tide last week, greatly lamented by those who knew him so well in life.

IN MEMORIAM.

Put away the little truer,
That our George late did wear;
He will need them here, oh, never—
He has climbed the golden stair.

CITY SUMMARY.

THE SUPPLEMENTARY SEASON at Daly's Theatre closed May 28. "All the Rage" did not prove a success, and it did not deserve patronage. Business fell off in a marked degree during the past two weeks.

RIKE'S "EVENING" TROUPE closed their engagement, as well as their traveling season, at the Grand Opera-house May 28, business having been fair.

THE VOKES FAMILY terminated their season in the Union-square Theatre with the past week. The change of bill did not increase the attendance.

THE PARK THEATRE closed for the season May 28. "The Mascot" by the Norcross-Grayson Troupe not achieving the success hoped for.

THE SUCCESSFUL WALKING MATCH at the Madison-square Garden the past week proved a more potent attraction than the entertainments presented at our theatres.

JOHN STETSON has leased Booth's Theatre, and will open it about Sept. 1.

HARRY MINER'S THEATRE was well attended May 30, when the new contributors to the programme were Chas. and Carrie Moore in skitatorial evolutions; Max and Martha Miller, German sketches; Perry and Lulu Ryan, songs-and-dances; Jessie Bell, serio-comic; Larry Tooley, Dutch drolleries; the Debas Sisters—Emma and Clara—duets; Fred Roberts, topical songs; the Troubadours—Mme. J. M. Zera, W. A. Fernandez and Miss C. C. Thomas—in trio-songs; and Clara Moore's performing dogs. The Comedy Four and American Four Consolidated shows open here June 6.

THE ARRIVALS at Dick Parker's American Theatre on Monday evening included Gallagher and Mack, who appeared in songs-and-dances; Charley Worley in Ethiopian eccentricities; Woods and Mack, whose specialties are solos on the bones and banjos; Kaine and Graham, who gave Hebrew and German impersonations; and W. H. Lightmire and Ida Gasparini in the drama of "The Boss, or Living for Vengeance."

THE COMPANY at the Vokes' Garden was strengthened this week by the appearance of the Cooper Brothers in songs-and-dances; Fred J. Huber and Kitty Ailene in the sketch entitled "One Night's Rest," Favor and Lear in Irish specialties, and T. W. Hanshaw and Frank Dunbar in the concluding drama, called "Brought to Bay, or Hers in Death."

JOHN E. INCE, who arrived May 30, is engaged for the comedy role in "Michael Strogoff" next season. He Summers in Newport, R. I.

SAMUEL E. WETTERILL, a well-known manager on the Pacific slope, for many years connected with Thomas Maguire, and a member of the California Legislature in 1876, is shortly to arrive in this city.

MANAGER WILL E. ENGLISH of Indianapolis arrived in town last week, and is quartered at the Coleman House, where he will remain for several weeks, filling time for his Opera-house. Mr. and Mrs. J. L. CARHART, James Taylor, Shirley Smith, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Wendell, J. Luckstone and Florence Noble of Janauchook's Combination, which closed its season in Bath, Me., May 27, have returned to town.

SAM T. JACK is in town, and can be addressed in care of Richardson & Foss, 112 Fourth avenue.

ANNA BOYLE and WILLIAM STAFFORD, both aspirants for metropolitan fame, appeared at the Windsor Theatre May 30 in "The Lady of Lyons." The performance was an interesting one, and even though the much used play brought the actors in direct comparison with many of the leading lights of the stage, they can be congratulated on having made an excellent mark for an agreeable and intelligent interpretation of the hero and heroine of Lytton's drama. It is evident that they both have been earnest, ambitious students, and have capabilities that may put them in a leading position.

Mr. Stafford, a clear, well-modulated voice, an agreeable presence (in which are a trim, square figure of medium height and a manly, good-looking face) and an action which is generally graceful, although at times somewhat mechanical and stilted. He left a good impression of his ability to do more in the future, and is entitled now to an excellent mark for a beginning so favorable to a successful career. Miss Boyle makes a handsome appearance, and gives the lines of Pauline intelligently, although not always with the best conviction. In her action she is graceful, although a little too self-conscious to give the best effect. Both performers suffered by playing in the barnlike house, especially when it was but sparsely filled. In a smaller theatre they would have appeared to better advantage, and made more evident their possession of qualities that may yet, as they become stronger actors and have the skill brought by a longer experience and intelligent study, give them a position of deserved prominence. As it is, they merit the mark of having made a dramatic success of their first appearance here together. The cast included: Pauline Deschappelles, Anna Boyle; Claude Melnotte, Wm. Stafford; Colonel Damas, Frederick Clippindale; Mons. Beausant, Frank Roberts; Glavis, J. A. Wilks; Mons. Deschappelles, Thos. Chapman; Landlord, John Matthews; Gaspar, Andrew Jacques; Captain Gervaise, C. C. Jordan; Captain Dupont, Harry Ferson; Major Desmoulins, Walter Brownson; Notary, Fred Jerome; Servant, G. Morlaunt; Madame Deschappelles, Miss E. Andrews; Widow Melnotte, Mrs. W. G. Jones; Marianne, Lillian Leland; "The Merchant of Venice," with Mr. Stafford as Shylock and Miss Boyle as Portia, will be the bill June 2.

JOHN A. MONINGER, agent of Craddock's Opera-house, Dallas, Texas, is to arrive about June 8, to fill dates for next season.

AT THE BUDGET THEATRE "The Mascot," now in its second month, continues to do a fair business, considering the warm weather.

NIRLO'S GARDEN was reopened May 30, when "All the Rage" was performed by the company which had played it in Daly's Theatre. A fair-sized audience was present.

J. W. LEONARD is dangerously ill with pneumonia.

THE THERMOMETER at half-past three o'clock P. M. May 30 reached ninety degrees in the shade, and business that night at all of the theatres suffered, notwithstanding that it was a holiday.

NOW CLOSED.—The Standard, Daly's, Booth's, Park, Union-square, Germania and Thalia Theatres, the San Francisco Minstrels, the Academy of Music and the Theatre Comique (no longer a theatre).

"HAZEL KIRKE" was withdrawn at the Madison-square Theatre after the performance of Tuesday, May 31, when it was acted for the fourth hundred and eighty-sixth consecutive time. On May 26 Miss Joan Burns replaced Miss Georgia Cayvan in the title-character, and Miss Annie Ellder, Miss Maud Stewart as Clara. The attendance during its final nights was good. "The Professor," an American character comedy in four acts, by W. H. Gillette, is to be produced June 1.

SIMMONDS & BROWN are very busy engaging people for the following combinations and theatres: Joseph Jefferson, "Sam'l o' Poseh," John T. Raymond, Greenwood of Texas, Milton Nobles, Hoey & Hardie, "Two Nights in Rome," Charlotte Thompson, Joseph Murphy, the Boston Theatre, the Chestnut-street Theatre, Philadelphia, and Booth's Theatre, New York.

THE ANNUAL MATINEE BENEFIT of Wm. McCoy, treasurer of the Grand Opera-house, May 30, attracted a very large attendance. The announced programme was given entire, there being no disappointments. The attractions were "A Pleasant Neighbor," acted by J. H. Ryan, W. J. McGee, Geo. W. Reed, Miss Connie Seymour, and Mrs. L. E. Barker; "The Song of the Whippoorwill" and "Baby Mine," sung by Miss Emme Roscoe; a recitation of "Asleep at the Switch," by D. B. Mockabee; "The Adopted Child," acted by John E. McDonough, T. J. Martin, George Jordan, Sol Smith, W. T. Johnson, I. Davoon, Nora Donnelly, Nellie Jones, Mrs. L. E. Barker, Mrs. Scallan and Miss Seymour; Frank Bond in "The Edlie," by Mr. and Mrs. George S. Knight gave their specialties; the prison-scene of "La Tour de Neale," performed by J. B. Studley, Charles Webster and Kate Meek; "The Rough Diamond," the cast including Ben Magnin, George W. Reed, Sedley Brown, Robert Brown, Mrs. Fred Williams, Ethel Gurney and Annie Scallan; concluding with feats of magic by Hermann.

THIS SEASON AT THE STANDARD THEATRE closed May 31. "Billie Taylor" continued to attract. On Monday night the business-manager, W. F. Morse, received a benefit, when, after the first act of the opera, A. P. Burbank recited "Pat's Panoram," written by J. S. Burdett, and a selection from the first act of "Rip Van Winkle," in imitation of Joseph Jefferson. The attendance was light.

THE LAST NIGHTS of "Dorba Juanita" in Haverly's Fifth-avenue Theatre closed last week. The attendance on Monday last was light. During the summer recess Benson Sherwood is to construct a new stage and make several alterations.

THE LAST WEEK OF THE SEASON in the Grand Opera-house opened May 30 to a fair-sized audience. Hoey & Hardie's "Child of the State" Combination being the attraction. The theatre will remain closed during the recess, which is to terminate Aug. 15.

BUSINESS FELL OFF in a marked degree at the opening of M. B. Curtis' third week in Haverly's Fourteenth-street Theatre. An extra matinee May 30 was, however, well patronized by the strangers in town to see the Decoration-day parade. Whether the theatre will be kept open during the summer depends entirely upon the business done.

W. HORACE LINGARD and wife arrived May 28.

DRAMATIC.

RAILROAD ACCIDENT.—The last train which left this city at a quarter past three o'clock May 30 for Philadelphia was thrown from the track by a misplaced switch at Bear Swamp, about two miles north of Trenton, N. J. Two persons were killed and about a dozen others injured. Among the latter were Miss Ella Chapman (who was on a pleasure trip with professional friends) and Topsy Venn of Rice's Surprise Party. Miss Chapman suffers from a sprained ankle and a bruised back, and Miss Venn from a concussion of the liver and of the head. At the Chestnut-street Opera-house that night Carrie Perkins supplied Miss Venn's place in "Hiawatha," and Edna Jones supplied the place of the injured "Harris' Combination," who were on the train, occupied injury.

MR. AND MRS. A. O. MILLER, supported by J. Huntington, Simcoe Lee, H. E. Ralston, E. W. Bowman, Chas. De Kress, Frank Lewis, Master Willie Huntington, Mrs. Paul Harland, Mrs. Dot Huntington, Miss Stella Miller, Mrs. Frank Lewis and Mrs. Lulu Miller, played in Manchester, Mich., May 30, 31, June 1; thence to Concord 2, 3, 4, Jackson 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11. Harry Weston is the agent.

W. M. HORACE LINGARD, COMEDY COMPANY have had a very successful season, and will reopen in St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 10. Dates for next season, when "Stolen Kisses," "The Tutor" and "Lion and Mouse" will be the comedy attractions, can be arranged through Simmonds & Brown.

OUR SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., correspondent writes concerning recent attractions there as under: "Tom Keene made his first appearance as Hamlet, and was welcomed by a large audience. His performance was a disappointment, however, and failed to justify the high expectations formed of his ability and talent, and the attendance was extremely light during his second and third representations. 'Richelieu' did not materially increase business, which remained only fair during the entire week, including 22, when 'Othello' was presented. Snelbaker's Majestic Combination will follow 30, after which Haverly's Madison Minstrels are to appear. 'Willie Edouin's' business at the Standard was extremely bad during the entire engagement, although the excellence of the entire company deserved better recognition. Kate Claxton's engagement at the Baldwin has been remunerative. The 'Fun on the Bristol' party open 30, for two weeks, and then make a country tour for four weeks. After their engagement Baldwin's will probably close, to permit the necessary clearing, repainting and general overhauling it requires prior to its reopening with a new stock company, expressly engaged for next season. Tom Maguire is the manager, and will remain so as long as he desires. John T. Raymond's first appearance at the California as Fresh the American drew a fair house. The play scored a success, and business has nightly improved. Miss Agnes Proctor was taken ill during the second week, and her part of Emma was performed by Miss Courtney Barnes."

MANAGER S. M. HICKEY and Treasurer M. V. B. Finch are to receive a complimentary benefit at the Griswold Opera-house, Troy, N. Y. (date not given), at which Daly's company appear in "Needles and Pins." Managers Leland of Albany will recite a poem, and a student at the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute will sing. The house was not open during the week ending May 28.

LOVEY AND BARRETT and company played in York, Pa., May 30, Scranton 31, going to Wilkesbarre June 1, Newark, N. J., 2, Paterson 3, Trenton 4, and there terminate the season. He is to begin his next season about Aug. 29. The same company now supporting him has been re-engaged, with the addition of Otis Skinner. Two new plays will be produced, and Mr. B. will appear twice in this city during the winter.

RIKE'S SURPRISE PARTY changed their base of operations from the Theatre, Brooklyn, to the Chestnut-street Opera-house, Philadelphia, May 30, when "Hiawatha" was given to a moderate house. "Hiawatha" will be repeated 31, and "Revels" will be given afternoon and night June 1 and night 2. Night of 3 and afternoon of 4 will be devoted to a complimentary testimonial to Edward E. Rice, proprietor of the organization. A performance of "Prince Achmet" night of 4, Catherine Lewis and N. C. Goodwin Jr. appearing, will close the season at the Chestnut-street Opera-house, which will then be closed for the summer.

WOOD'S MUSEUM, Philadelphia, put up "Our Gigs" for the first time night of May 30 to a fair house. Chas. Stanley made a big hit as Potter. Same bill every night and Wednesday and Saturday afternoons of current week. "Oliver Twist" was given afternoon of above date to good attendance. It will be repeated on Tuesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons. Next week, regular bill, Bronson Howard's "Saragosa." Off-matinee bill, "Waiting for the Verdict." Q. C. Brown, treasurer, took his second benefit of the present season afternoon and evening of May 27. The afternoon bill consisted of "Pygmalion and Galatea" and "Slasher and Crasher," the beneficiary making his first appearance on any stage in the latter, playing the speechless part of a servant. The night bill consisted of "A Scrap of Paper" and "Meg's Diversion." The beneficiary was called for, but did not appear. The afternoon house was moderate, but a large audience was present at night. An excellent business was done last week with "Our American Cousin."

WALTERS' DRAMATIC COMPANY is to close a successful season of forty weeks in Nevada, Ia., June 4. Mr. and Mrs. Walters, Miss Nellie Walters, Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Haven, business-manager, and wife, and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Bennett go to Indianapolis, Ia., to rest for the summer. The company takes the road again about the first of September.

A FIRST OLD-MAN and a heavy old-woman are wanted for next season. See Nef Graves' advertisement.

FULLY FIVE THOUSAND PEOPLE were present, says our correspondent, "at the opening of Oakland Garden, Boston Highlands, on the night of May 28, to listen to the playing of Brown's Brigade Band. The grounds were brilliantly illuminated with calcium and colored lights, and a display of fireworks gave an additional pleasure. Haverly's Colored Brass Band and the corps of jubilee singers from the minstrel company gave sacred concerts afternoon and evening of 29, the regular opening occurring afternoon of 30, when the Colored One Hundred appeared in a choice programme of many new features, with several familiar acts, before a very large audience. The garden has been beautified in many ways, new walks have been laid out, an ornamental entrance built, and cages of monkeys and other animals amuse young and old. Nor have the improvements ended here; the seating accommodation of the pavilion has been amplified, a promenade built round its three sides, a new drop-curtain, representing the harbor and city of Naples, as well as new scenery, added. A violent thunder and rain storm commenced in the early evening, which affected the attendance at all the resorts of amusement, though the Park Theatre was crowded. James E. Conly the tenor reappeared as Frederic Prince of Pisa with the Grayson-Norcross Opera Company, who sang "The Mascot" at the Globe Theatre."

HORACE LEWIS, a late member of Genevieve Ward's "Forget-me-not" Company, and Portia Albee, a young professional lady, were married in Boston, Mass., May 29.

RUMOROUS MARRIAGE OF BERNARD—A cablegram dated London, May 31, states: "The World says: 'We hear on good authority that Sarah Bernhardt is to marry on Saturday next with M. Angelo, who has been traveling with her in America.'"

WHAT IS BELIEVED to have been the largest audience ever crowded into the Walnut-street Theatre, Philadelphia, was assembled there May 30, when S. F. Nixon and Chas. M. Southwell, respectively associate-manager and treasurer of the establishment, and Joseph McCall, treasurer of the Chestnut-street Opera-house, were the recipients of a complimentary benefit. The entertainment consisted of "Photos" by the Harrisons. The demand for seats, even many days beforehand, so far exceeded the supply that Treasurer Southwell, at the request of his friends, was induced to accept a separate benefit for himself afternoon of May 31. This event is reported by telegraph in another column. Among the attractions programmed are an orchestra of fifty musicians, under the leadership of Simon Haseler; Mark Haseler, H. Sator of Rice Surprise Party, Chas. Kauffman, Wm. Morgan and Mr. Rosewig; a grand vocal and instrumental concert, given by Alice Oates, Wm. Stoll, violinist; Paul Kirchner, tenor; Stuart Harold, baritone; and Thos. E. Harkins, contralto; Frank Moran in his stumpy speech "Stolen Kisses"; Lew Simmons in funny songs and sayings; the Harrisons in a scene from Act 2 of "Photos"; Ella Montijo, soprano; Lillie Hinton in recitation "Custer's Last Charge"; Butler and Leslie in their specialties; selections by the principal members of the Surprise Party; and the entertainment will conclude with the new extravaganza, by John J. McNally, entitled "The Class Gathering." Geo. Holland opens as Lord Dundreary in "Our American Cousin" for the first time in Philadelphia, June 6. Rice's Surprise Party drew only moderately last week.

MANAGER JOHN W. ALBAUGH benefited May 23 at the Holliday-street Theatre, Baltimore, Md., to a $1,500 house, and a most enthusiastic audience. "Damon and Pythias" was presented, with the beneficiary, Fred Ward and a strong cast. The presentation to Mr. and Mrs. Albaugh of a massive scepter and choice flowers by the employees of the house was a most pleasant feature of the entertainment. Mr. Albaugh in a speech at the closing of the benefit expressed his intention of making no change in the officers of the house for the coming season.

THE MITCHELL DRAMATIC COMPANY closed a week's season in Tombstone, Arizona, May 23. A theatre is to be built there. A DRAMATIC COMPANY and several amateurs are wanted. See Geo. J. Curtis' card.

WON AT LAST closed its second week and the season at Hood's Theatre, Chicago, Ill., May 28. Steele Mackay, Harry Courtaine, Belle Archer and Louise Sylvester were most pleasing. May 29, the San Francisco Minstrels appeared here for the first time in ten years.

ROSE WOOD in "Camille" and "Frou-Frou" had a successful but not over-enthusiastic engagement in Chicago, Ill., at the Grand Opera-house, last week. She is now starring on a tour of Illinois and Wisconsin, under J. A. Hamlin, manager, with Will J. Davis. She returns shortly with Lewis Morrison to support James O'Neill at the above house.

AT PENCK'S OPERA-HOUSE, Minneapolis, Minn., "East Lynne" was to have been played May 30, 31, June 1. "The Hunchback" is billed for 2, 3, and "Masks and Faces" 4, with "Ingomar" for matinee. Miss Phoebe McAllister is to receive a benefit 2. Mr. and Mrs. William Lloyd closed their engagement May 28, and left for Chicago.

THE "HAZEL KIRKE" PARTY from the New York Madison-square Theatre left Chicago May 29 for San Francisco. Chas. Bowser succeeds Mr. Ferguson as Pittacus Green, Frank Weston Mr. Aveling as Aaron Rodney, Kate Denin Mrs. Cecile Rush as Lady Travers, and Mrs. Sol Smith Mrs. Carrie Jamison as Mercy Kirke.

THE GRAND OPERA-HOUSE, Chicago, Ill., plays the Fifth-avenue "Olivette" Company May 30, Rial's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" Combination June 6, James O'Neill 13, and Tony Pastor 20.

"BLACK DIAMOND" at the Halsted-street Opera-house, Chicago, Ill., was withdrawn May 28. "Punch" was produced 30. Walter Lawrence, leading-man, Mr. and Mrs. S. Robinson and Geo. A. Lemming join the company next week. There is a possibility that this house will close its regular season June 4, playing thereafter only combinations.

LIBRARY HALL, Pittsburg, Pa., will be under the management of Fred A. Parke next season, W. W. Fullwood, the present manager, retiring.

THE CARNIVAL NOVELTY COMPANY, a Pittsburg, Pa., organization, gave a performance in Bradford, Pa., May 28. JOHN ELLERER has fully recovered from his severe illness.

FANNY LOUISE BUCKINGHAM played "Mazepa" at the Pittsburg (Pa.) Opera-house last week to a fair attendance. She appears as Dick Turpin this week.

A COMPLIMENTARY BENEFIT has been tendered to Frank N. Scott at the Park Theatre, Indianapolis, Ind., June 7. He is the resident pro-sageant of the Messrs. Dickson.

THE BARTHELM COMEDY COMPANY can be addressed as per Ernest Bartram's card.

THE FAREWELL BENEFIT tendered to Fred A. Dubois, the retiring business-manager of the Leland Opera-house, Albany, N. Y., May 25, was a success. Hermann in magical illusions, and "Damon and Pythias," with Fred Ward, Manager Albaugh and wife and Kate Meek in the chief characters, comprised the bill. Manager Albaugh has relinquished his lease of this house, and Mrs. Leland will immediately begin to alter, renovate, etc., preparatory to opening on Sept. 1.

"THE PROFESSOR" was acted by the Madison-square Theatre Company in South Norwalk, Ct., May 26, Danbury 27, New Britain 28, Meriden 30, after which they returned to New York City. These were the only performances given, and the company takes the road with which the piece was produced in New York City June 1.

McVICKER'S THEATRE, Chicago, Ill., will be provided before the Fall season opens with spacious covered carriage-approaches on either side of the house, so that ladies can step directly from their carriages into the theatre without damage from snow or rain.

HARRISON AND HART in "Mulligan's Silver Wedding" opened at the Theatre, Brooklyn, E. D. May 30, to moderate business. This is the last week of the season at this house. The Fall season will open Aug. 29 with Collier's "Banker's Daughter" Combination.

THE ATTRACTION for the last week of the season at the Park Theatre, Brooklyn, is "Cinderella at School," which was played May 30, afternoon and evening, to light houses by the company's Comedy Company. Rites ahead: Troy June 6, Rochester 7, Buffalo 8, 9, 10, 11, E. L. L. one week. A performance for the benefit of A. B. Samuels will be given at this theatre June 11.

BART W. WALLACE, the well-known delineator of Irish character, was the recipient of a complimentary benefit at the Oxford-street Theatre, Philadelphia, May 28, the principal feature of the bill being the beneficiary's drama "The Irish Exile."

TONY DENTON'S PANTOMIME PARTY closed the regular season at Heck's Opera-house, Cincinnati, May 28. Business was large, but tapered off considerably after the advent of Coup's Circus, 25. The next season will commence Aug. 22. In consequence of the loss of the Sunday business, prices are to be materially cut, the figures determined on being: General admission to dress-circle, 50 cents; reserved seats and parquet, 75 cents; balcony, 35 cents; gallery, 25 cents. For the benefit to Manager Collins, 28, the bill was "The Colleen Bawn," with Mr. Collins as Miles, Mrs. Collins as Eily, Mrs. F. A. Bates as Anne Chute, Kate Beebe as Mrs. Cregan, Ida Tracy as Sheelach, and members of the Clio Club in the other characters. Treasurer James E. Fennedy is to have a benefit June 10, and D. B. Hughes one later.

THE JULIA HUNT COMPANY produced Sidney Rosenfeld's new play "Florine" in Cynthia, Ky., for the first time on any stage, May 26. The audience was small and the cast imperfect, so that the test was unsatisfactory; but the company thought well of the piece, which is a translation from the German. Ida Van Cortland and Mr. and Mrs. Selden Irwin have been added for the St. Louis season. Since Lee left in Cincinnati, and joined A. O. Miller's Co. for the summer.

THE GOSWICK HOPPER "One Hundred Wives" Company began a two nights' engagement in the Academy of Music, Buffalo, N. Y., May 30, to a fair audience. The Vokes Family appear June 1, 2, and the McGibney Family 3, 4. The Lingers played "Stolen Kisses" 24, 25, to only moderate business. Our correspondent says: "The hot weather of the past few days, and which still continues, is materially lessening the attendance at indoor amusements."

FOR THE "EDGEWOOD FOLKS," under Sol Smith Russell and Fred Berger, Simmonds & Brown have engaged Frank Kilday, Frank Locke, Fred Bonde, Harry Hottel, Virginia Bray, Lillian Westbrook and others.

ALTRA HIRZ is to travel with Wm. Callough as treasurer.

EDWIN F. CLEARY of the Scott-Siddons party arrived at his home in Covington, Ky., last week.

CARRIE MCCHERRY is to travel with M. B. Curtis next season. W. H. COOPER and wife have been engaged by Simmonds & Brown for Milton Nobles.

MR. AND MRS. CHAS. WALCOTT have been engaged to travel with Janauchook.

LAWIS MORRIS requests us to contradict the rumor that he is going to California. He is still disengaged.

E. G. STONE goes with N. C. Goodwin next season as business-manager.

GEO. WESKILLS goes with Genevieve Ward next season.

BAKER and FARRON, under the circuit management of Powers & Preston of Rand's Opera-house, Troy, N. Y., played in Schenectady May 30, Hoosic Falls 31, going to Bennington, N. Y., June 1, Rutland 2, Whitehall, N. Y., 3, Glens Falls 4, Saratoga 6, Cohoes 7, Gloversville 8, Ilion 9, Little Falls 10, Amsterdam 11, and close season.

RAND'S OPERA-HOUSE, Troy, N. Y., was open only May 27, 28, with the Harrisons in "Photos," and business good.

DEDICATED.—The new opera-house in Lawrence, Mass., was dedicated evening of May 26 with a performance of "Jane Eyre" by Maggie Mitchell and company. The audience numbered about fifteen hundred, among whom were many Boston friends of Manager J. W. Lanagan. That gentleman was called before the curtain at the end of the fourth act of the play, and responded briefly. A second performance was given 30, "East Lynne" being the selection, with Edith Stanmore, a pupil of Rachel Noah, as Lady Isabel and Madame Vine, supported by J. W. Lanagan as Sir Francis Levison, Mark M. Price as Archibald Carlyle, Rachel Noah as Barbara, H. B. Norman, W. H. Southard, W. W. Mum, William Langgan, Little Josie Homer, Mrs. W. L. Ayling, Helen Gould and May Whitney.

THE JOLLITIES COMBINATION met with so much success in "The Electrical Doll" during the past week at the Gaiety Theatre, Boston, Mass., that they are to remain another, closing their season, as well as that of the theatre, June 6. Messrs. Buckman, Menard and Oliver, with other friends of the theatre, made their annual appeal May 31, and Stanley Felch and Frank A. Daniels benefit June 3.

WITH THE EXCEPTION of about six weeks, all the time at the Globe Theatre, Boston, has been filled for next season.

THE BOSTON (MASS.) MUSEUM COMPANY continued in "The Governor" in Bangor, Me., May 30, Augusta 31, going to Rockland June 1, Portland 2, Milford, Mass., 3, to close the season. "THE BANKER'S DAUGHTER" was reproduced at the Boston Theatre, Boston, Mass., May 30, and is to be continued till the end of the season, June 11.

THE FORTIETH AND LAST WEEK of the fortieth regular dramatic season at the Boston (MASS.) MUSEUM opened afternoon of May 30 with a continuance of Frank Mayo in "Davy Crockett," which proved very attractive the previous week.

WM. GILL, late assistant scenic-artist of the Boston (MASS.) MUSEUM, is painting scenery for the Mechanics' Institute, St. John, N. B.

THE NEW MUSIC HALL, Milford, Mass., will be formally opened evening of June 3 by the Boston Museum Company, who are to perform "The Gypsy."

THE GREEK TRAGEDY "Edipus Tyrannus" was repeated for the last time in Sanders' Theatre, Cambridge, Mass., May 27, by the original cast, for the benefit of George Riddle.

ANTHONY & ELLIS' "UNCLE TOM" COMPANY, No. 1, closed a season of forty-two weeks in Bangor, Me., May 28. Next season these managers will have four companies in the field, and have re-engaged Minnie Foster, Kate Partington and most of their former company. A. H. Simonds, business-agent, was presented by his managers during the past week with a valuable gold watch.

ARMSTRONG'S COMEDY COMPANY closed their season May 21, and for the next season, commencing Sept. 1, a full company, including a child actress of six or eight years, and a leader of orchestra are wanted. See A. A. Armstrong's card.

MANAGERS of first-class combinations desiring to arrange time for next season at English's Opera-house, Indianapolis, Ind., are referred to an advertisement in another column.

MARRIED.—Miss Effie Ellsler and Frank Weston were united in marriage in the Cathedral of Saints Peter and Paul, Chicago, Ill., at eleven o'clock a. m. May 29, by Bishop McElroy. Only a few persons were present, as no cards of invitation were issued, and there were no festivities. The bride and groom acted their parts in "Hazel Kirke" that night.

LUCIBORNE SEARRELL, under engagement to Augustin Daly, arrived in San Francisco, Cal., from Australia, May 17.

JAMES A. MEADE, Eliza Long and Adele Waters left San Francisco, Cal., with Crane & Robson's Combination. Chas. B. Welles left May 24.

W. C. CROSBIE was to have opened in the Winter Garden, San Francisco, Cal., May 28. Early in June he will journey Eastward, making a brief stay in Salt Lake City.

WILHELM in still in San Francisco, Cal., carrying the banner. So are J. B. Grismer, Harry Colton, Ross Osborne, J. W. Jennings and Augusta Chambers.

BARTLEY CAMPBELL's "My Geraldine" Company played to such large business in the Grand Opera-house, Milwaukee, Wis., May 23, 24, 25, that the management re-engaged them for the rest of the week. They closed their season there.

GEORGE B. BERRILL was presented in St. Louis, Mo., May 12, with a ten-pound boy by his wife, Bessie Taylor.

HARRY G. RICHMOND is ready to arrange for the coming season. See card. He is at the Adelphi Theatre, Buffalo, N. Y., this week.

KATE FRERSON, heavy character and responsible business, publishes her address in another column.

THE BRIDLE & PRINDLE PLEASURE PARTY can be addressed as per card.

DAISIE MARKOW, who is now playing Tony and making a mark in the part with Smith's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" Company, advertises her address.

C. A. FORTER, agent for the Wilkinsons the past three seasons, is now local reporter of "The Wisconsin County Transcript," Danielsonville, Ct., and will so remain till August, when he commences his theatrical season.

CORRECTION.—It is Mr. Van Deren, and not Mrs. Van Deren, who is engaged for next season at the Chestnut-street Theatre, Philadelphia.

CIRCUSES.

FRANK HARRINGTON and Nellie Montrose, as solicitor and secretary respectively, joined Sells Brothers' concert at La Crosse, Wis., May 29.

THE MANAGEMENT of the Coup Show has decided to remain in Indianapolis, Ind., two days, instead of one, as originally advertised. The dates are June 2, 3. Never in the history of tent-shows in that locality, says our correspondent, "has a circus been so largely advertised both in and out of the city."

YANK NEWELL joined the Robbins & Colvin Show as special agent May 20, the Hudson & Castello concern, with which he was formerly connected, having come to grief three weeks ago in Illinois.

ACCIDENT.—A telegram dated Upper Sandusky, O., May 30, says: "Bib Forepaugh, while performing on the horizontal bar at the Circus Royal and English Menagerie, here, Saturday night, fell to the ground in consequence of one of the stay wires breaking. He was picked up insensible, and found to be very seriously injured. He was conveyed to the Hudson House, where he still lies under medical treatment."

W. C. COUP'S COMBINED SHOWS drew enormous crowds in Cincinnati May 25, 26, 27, 28. Although the canvas was enlarged thirty-five feet all round, hundreds were turned away on two nights. Route from there: Louisville, Ky., 30, 31, New Albany, Ind., June 1, St. Louis 6, one week.

JAMES T. JOHNSON & CO.'S CIRCUS AND TRAINED ANIMALS take the road June 4 with the following officers and people: James T. Johnson, O. O. Smith and P. H. Cleveland, proprietors; James T. Johnson, manager; G. O. Smith, assistant manager; P. H. Cleveland, master of ceremonies; J. M. Watson, treasurer; Charles M. Royce, equestrian director; Bob Mack, general agent; William Jerome, press agent; Charles Johnson, master of canvas; Chas. Pezoli, leader of band, with ten musicians; Charles M. Royce, Gus Shaw and Chas. Shaw, showmen; Edith, John Saunders and Bur. Bernard, riders; Leonard Steiner, Walla Leonard and Leaux and Rice, gymnasts; Mlle. Rita and J. R. Sanders, contortionists; O'Brien Bros., Burdick, Goodrich, Andrews, and Harvey and others, leapers and tumblers. The managers run their own privileges. Route: Wellington, Kan., June 4, Caldwell 6, Honeywell 7, Arkansas City 8, Winfield 9, Burden 10.

BATCHELDER & DORIS' CIRCUS are billed for Waverly, N. Y., June 1, Oswego 2, Susquehanna, Pa., 3, Carbondale 4, Binghamton, N. Y., 5, Norwich 7, Cortland 8, Ithaca 9, Elmira 10. They continue to do an excellent business, and the following press-notices testify to their popularity:

Their performances in the ring are above that of the average circus. —Easton Sentinel.

The wagons looked neat and clean, and the drivers, flags and carriage presented a finer appearance than many of the kind here in several years. —Easton Daily Argus.

Batchelder and Doris' Circus has come, exhibited and gone, and we can safely say, has left an excellent impression as to management

among all who witnessed either the street pageant, the menagerie or the ring performance. The attendance last night was fully as large as the afternoon. They maintained their reputation for hard-work in giving a neat, artistic performance, conducted in an orderly and gentlemanly manner. The programme last evening was enlarged by the addition of the Russian Athletes, whose performance on the ladders was marvellous and heartily entered. As to the wire, the dive for life, and the cannon trick were very good, and merited the applause bestowed. The tumbling, the dogs, the horses, the dancing, the contortionists, the Javanese,

the Indians, and colored jubilee singers were all good in their specialties, and the show as a whole deserves the approval of the press and the patronage of the public. —Easton Daily Express.

MISCELLANEOUS.

E. D. DAVIES, ventriloquist, after an absence of eight years, has just arrived here from Australia. He is now making engagements through Simmonds & Brown, or he can be addressed in care of this office.

THE GLOBE (FORMERLY DIXON'S) OPERA-HOUSE, Hamilton, O., is open for combinations. The house has been leased for a term of years by a company who have refitted it throughout, and advertise that it is in excellent condition. Liberal sharing terms are offered.

THE HALLS OF THE OPERA-HOUSE, Chicago, Ill., is open for combinations during the summer season. See Horan & O'Connor's card.

THE SINGER BOSCO THEATRE, magician, ventriloquist and grotesque specialty people, are showing to reported large business in the Lake Superior copper country.

BUTTS' DIME SHOW was in Whitehall, Mich., May 26, Fremont Centre 27, Muskegon 28, Sheboygan 30.

PROF. E. C. TAYLOR, magician, began a week's season in Santa Fe, N. M., May 16; thence to Las Vegas for a like period.

CLARENCE WHITE, Punch-and-Judy performer, whose address find elsewhere, is at liberty.

A TEXT and a lot of sidewalk property are advertised for sale by James Pearson.

JOHN N. SHERMAN, aeronaut, can be engaged to make balloon ascensions. See address in another column.

A PUNCH-AND-JUDY SHOW, with all the necessary figures and belongings, is advertised for sale by H. Schmitzler.

JOHN BALDWIN HAY, late of Syria and the Holy Land, gave an illustrated lecture May 25 at Association Hall, Philadelphia, on "Great Believers." The fifty-first annual exhibition of the Academy of Fine Arts is being well attended.

One of the best pictures on view is a miniature called "A Foggy Morning." It is the work of Frank F. English, a young Philadelphia artist who is rapidly rising into prominence.

THE ENTERTAINMENT given in Horticultural Hall, Boston, Mass., May 30, under the management of Johnny Arneaux, for the benefit of the fund being raised for the widow of John Brown, introduced the Big Four of Haverly's Colored Minstrels, the Sells Brothers, and the comedians from Haverly's, Callender's and Rogers' Kentucky Minstrels.

MONTIMER the illusionist, who is to commence a summer season at the Boston (Mass.) Museum June 6, gives a private entertainment at that house on the afternoon of 2.

A WHALE measuring sixty feet long was towed into Boston Harbor May 27.

PHILADELPHIA LODGE, No. 2, B. P. O. OF ELKS, was to have held a social session at its lodge-room, northeast corner of Tenth and Chestnut streets, May 29, but it was given up on account of the death of Brother Wm. L. Deane, for many years a compositor, editor and pressman of Philadelphia newspapers, and for a long time past engaged in the last-named capacity on The Public Ledger. "Elks' Rest," in Mount Moriah Cemetery, now presents a beautiful appearance, almost its entire surface being covered by a literal carpet of flowers. A committee of the brothers visited it May 30 (Decoration-day), and placed floral mementoes upon the only two graves in the lot, those of Brothers Geo. H. Maguire and Warren S. Fox. A foundation of brick-work, eight feet deep, has been placed beneath the pedestal on which stands the bronze elk. The lodge meets but once a month, on account of the warm weather, and for the same reason will hold no more social sessions for some time.

T. F. WOOD'S MUSEUM is being exhibited in Albany, N. Y. ALF. BURNETT and Mr. Whitfield, humorist, gave entertainments in Bradford, Ct., May 30, Gilford 31, and are billed in Clinton June 1, Centrebrook 2, Deep River 3, New York City 4.

CHARLES FISHER, aeronaut, with his hot-air balloon, can be engaged to make ascensions on July 1. He has a basket, and gives trapese performance at an altitude of 3,000 feet. His address is published in our business department.

ANNA ELIZA YOUNG delivered an interesting lecture on "Mormonism" to a good house at Masonic Temple, Louisville, Ky., May 27.

PHIL MILLIGAN'S DIME MUSEUM, now being exhibited in Michigan, is to open in Atlantic City, N. J., July 1.

J. C. POWELLSON has assumed the management of McKichner's Opera-house, Canandaigua, N. Y., and correspondence for him can be directed as per card.

JUGGLING TRICKS are wanted by W. N. York, who advertises. JOHNNY KEENAN publishes his address elsewhere.

A PROGRAMMER wants a position for next season. See H. T. G. card.

VIOLA J. SANDERS, the four-footed girl, is in Flora, Ill., sick with the measles.

THE TRIO MUSEUM began its fourth week May 30 with Wheeler and Wilson, Elton and dog Topsy, and Mickey in the lecture-room, and a new mechanical curiosity—ships, cars, catamarans, mulls, circus street-scenes, etc., all in action—in the promenade. Johnny Mack left 28. Business fair.

ZERA and LA CARDO, magicians and ventriloquists, open their summer season at Lawrenceville, Pa., June 1, and perform there also 2, 3, Wellsboro 4, 6, 7, Antrim 8, 10, 11. Sam A. Scribner will remain in position as general agent.

LORENZA, magician, will give his magical entertainment at Coney Island this summer, also performing with his troupe of birds. He will be located at the Aquarium. Elsewhere he advertises that he can be engaged for the Fall and Winter season.

AT INSTITUTE HALL, Fortieth street, above Chestnut, Philadelphia, a literary and musical entertainment will be given June 2 by Mme. Mirelli d'Auria, previous to leaving for Europe.

A. J. RUD'S FLOATING OPERA-HOUSE, which was to have exhibited in Memphis, Tenn., May 29, got stuck on a sand-bar, and failed to put in an appearance. She passed up 25 with the intention of exhibiting at Osceola, Ark., 27.

BARTHOLOMEW'S "EQUINE PARADOX" did a good business in St. James Hall, Buffalo, N. Y., the week ending May 28, and will continue another.

THE BROADWAY THEATRE, Williamburg, N. Y., is to let. See J. S. BERRY card.

RABON LITTLEFINGER and Count Rosebud continue with Cole's Circus. They publish their address elsewhere.

DICK PARKER'S AMERICAN THEATRE, this city, is to rent. See advertisement.

AMATEUR.

THE ROXBURY INTEL MATHEMATICAL MUSEUM, CHURCH-CHOIR TROUPEBOURS gave their second annual minstrel performance in the Dudley-street Opera-house, Boston, Mass., May 25. "The Colleen Bawn" was acted in the same house 26.

THE CHICAGO CRITERION DRAMATIC CLUB produced the past week in Aurora, Ill., "The Midnight Watch," a drama of the French Revolution. Miss May (Goldard, Sam Erickson and Frank Baxter appeared in the cast.

THE WALLACE CLUB of Cincinnati are to close their season June 1 with "Time and the Hour."

THE WORLD OF AMUSEMENT.

Brief Notes of Show-life Everywhere.

—On May 27 the Council of the Musical Festival Association agreed unanimously that it would be about the proper thing to allow Theodore Thomas from seventy-five to one hundred thousand dollars spending-money in the matter of the projected festival. Danrosch will win.

—William L. Drane, for about forty-five years either a journalist or a superintendent of printing in Philadelphia, died there May 27. He was a prominent member of the Elks, and for a time was trustee of Philadelphia Lodge.

—There is no chance of opening our Metropolitan Museum of Art and the Museum of Natural History on Sunday.

—Boston is taking steps to have a World's Fair in 1885.

—Samuel Colville has decided not to go to Europe.

—The Baroness Burdett-Coutts has recovered the large sapphire brooch she lost at the Queen's drawing-room.

—John McCullough will come back to us next August.

—After a long absence, M. Maurel reappeared at the Grand-opera, Paris, on May 6, in the role of Hamlet.

—Edwin Booth and family are to sail for home June 18.

—"The Exiles of Erin," at the Olympic Theatre, London, Eng., holds up Mormonism to the orthodox exorcism.

—It is Edwin Booth's present intention to go back to Europe next autumn and complete his foreign engagements.

—The first of the season's concerts on the Mall in Central Park was given May 28 by the Seventh-regiment Band.

—Sig. Campanini and wife sailed for Italy on May 28.

—John W. Norton of St. Louis was in Cincinnati last week.

—The scenic-artist Dewitt C. Wagh has, with his wife, gone Summering to Point Pleasant, West Virginia.

—The Vokes family are next season to have the services of the capable Gus Pennoyer as their business-agent here.

—Mrs. Frank Mordaunt was unable to recognize in the suspected police-sergeant the person who threw the pepper.

—Miss Katharine Rogers is back from San Francisco.

—"The World" still wags; but it is not peopled so numerously as sanguine management could hope to have it.

—W. C. Coup of circus fame reached Cincinnati last week.

—The successful band-leader, George C. Dobson, sold to Judge Fulton of South Boston May 19 his house on Binley street, Boston, for $1,000 in advance of the price Dobson paid for it eighteen months ago.

—It is said that the first theatre ever opened in California still stands at the corner of Pacific and Scott streets, Monterey. It is an adobe building, of course.

—Eliza Weatherly is expected back from England June 6.

—Phil H. Irving was in Cincinnati last week.

—Miss Jennie Lee will not return here until August next.

—Old Shadrach is to be the star of the next season in which Frank Mordaunt proposes to "star" next season.

—M. W. Whitney and family Summer in Plymouth, Mass.

—Jules Jordan, the Providence tenor, sails for Europe this week and returns in August.

—Persie Bell (Campanari) the violinist is to again reside in Boston, Mass.

—The new opera written by Clarence S. Sternberger will be heard in this city and Boston next season.

—Thomas W. Henry, leader of the Boston Cadet Band, was presented with an elegant gold cornet evening of May 28 by members of Company C, First Corps of Cadets, M. V. M.

—Frank Guider the pianist will play his favorite instrument at the Sea View House, Iye Beach, this Summer.

—B. J. Lang, with his family, will rest during the Summer at the Rock House, Iye Beach, N. Y.

—It would seem that as a lecturer the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher is becoming less and less of an attraction. He appeared before a scant audience at the Masonic Theatre, Nashville, Tenn., on the night of May 27, and his engagement for the succeeding night was canceled by the management.

—Capt. Armit arrived here last week from London, Eng.

—The telegraphist street in New York is named after Charlotte Thompson, closed engagements in Denver, Col., May 28.

—Before permitting its production in America, W. G. Wills intends to reconstruct his play of "Juana."

—The musical-instrument factory of Cubley & Co., at Ravenswood, Ill., was burned May 28.

—Charles Barron of the Boston Museum will pass his vacation in Woodstock, N. Y., with Frank Kilday and J. H. Ring.

—Mr. and Mrs. Weaver, Frank Kilday and J. H. Ring are the only members of Salvini's late company who have been engaged by C. A. Chizola to support Rossi next season.

—J. H. St. Maur will be the business-manager.

—Mr. and Mrs. Neil Burgess will spend some few weeks in Boston before taking up their residence in Woodbridge, N. J., for the Summer.

—Charles H. Thayer is to be the general-manager of the Chelsea (Mass.) Beach Association.

—H. A. McGilgren will again assume the business-management of the excursion-steam Empire State, which commences running in Boston Harbor the latter part of June.

—Carrie E. Haggood, for the past two seasons a member of the Boston (Mass.) Museum company, has been engaged for Daly's Theatre, New York, for the next season as "A Foggy Morning."

—Rachel Noah, the Boston actress, gave so much pleasure by a recent reading before the St. Catherine's Literary Society of Providence, R. I., that the organization sent her a copy of Shakespeare, beautifully gotten up and suitably inscribed, in token of their appreciation.

—The divorce case between Major J. B. Pond and his wife, Isabel Stone, Pond the vocalist, will come before the Boston courts this week.

—The Opera-house to be built in Bangor, Me., will seat between 1,100 and 1,200 people.

—Since "Jack" Haverly is called "General," Fitzsimmons has been promoted to "Colonel" in Chicago.

—Oscar Cobb, architect for Haverly's Theatre, Chicago, is also building opera-houses in Kansas City and St. Louis.

—Marie Mitchell, who for four years in Newport, R. I., May 28, and left for home, Long Branch, N. J.

—Lotta has closed her season.

—Two of Eliza Weatherly's sisters, it is said, will accompany her to this country.

—Robson and Crane closed their season in Eureka, Nev., May 24.

—Mrs. Conyns Carr has been making a new arrangement of "Frou-Frou" for Modjeska, who is to appear in it at the Princess' Theatre, London, on June 4.

—It is calculated that the entertainment at the Academy of Music, this city, in aid of the Poe Memorial, cost $1,600.79. The gross receipts were but $1,192.

—Joseph Matton, the English dramatist, is on the eve of returning to this country.

—The mother of "Glen Brown of Rugby" otherwise Thomas Hughes, arrived in this country last week, and by this time is at Rugby, Tenn., with her son Hastings Hughes. She is now eighty-four years old, and intends to pass her remaining days at Rugby with her granddaughter.

—"Butterfly Fever," produced at the Criterion Theatre, London, May 17, with Charles Wyndham in the chief character, is a new version of "A Gay Deceiver," produced at the Royalty in 1879, both versions being by James Mortimer.

The original piece is "La Papillone," by Sardou, which was produced at the Comedie Francaise, Paris, about ten years ago, and was roundly hissed. At the close of last year Sardou remodelled it, and produced it at the Gymnase, where it achieved a brilliant and remunerative success.

—Londoners rate Jenny Lind as a millionaire.

—Jananasek, who is expected in this city during the current week, is to sail for Europe June 10, and return to us some time during October next.

—It is stated that in Kansas three thousand signatures have already been sought for a paper calling for a State musical festival.

DEATHS IN THE PROFESSION.

A SAD ACCIDENT occurred at the Hippodrome, Paris, France, May 6. A lady rider known as Mlle. De Ghyka was concluding her haute cole performance on a spirited horse, when, during the final gallop at full speed, which should go no farther than one round of the circus, she lost control of the animal, which continued its course, stumbled, fell, and in its effort to rise again came down, this time with its full weight, on the unfortunate young woman, who had not been able to extricate her foot from the stirrup. She was at once removed to the Hospital Beaujon, where she expired 9 from the effects of a compound fracture of the leg. The deceased was a Dalmatian by birth, and had begun her professional career while a mere child. She was known by the name of Francesca until her marriage with a Serbian gentleman, M. Laos De Ghyka, whom she left soon after their union to resume her old life. She had gained great success in Russian and Austrian circuses, but had not been in Paris prior to this season.

FRED O'BRIEN, the well-known leaper, died of hemorrhage of the lungs on board the steamship England, en route to Liverpool, April 28, his thirty-third birthday, and his remains were buried at sea. His illness grew out of an accident which befell him while turning a double somersault over a number of elephants in the Madison-square Garden with Barnum, Bailey & Hutchinson's Circus, early last April. His physicians thought that a sea-voyage might benefit him, hence the trip. He was a native of Buffalo, N. Y., where his mother still resides. Early in life he manifested a fondness for athletic sports, and joined the circus profession, in which he rapidly rose to distinction. He had traveled with many of the best companies, and as a valet he had few if any rivals. He was a member of the New York Lodge B. P. O. Elks, and left a wife and one child.

THEODORE DUNBAR, gymnast and acrobat, died of consumption in the Penitentiary, Columbus, O., May 25. When traveling with W. W. Cole's Circus, in 1879, he got to drinking with a hard crowd in Dayton, O. That night an old lady who kept a toll-gate near the city was taken from her bed, and her feet held on a red-hot stove until she revealed the hiding-place of a large sum of money. Dunbar, with three companions, was arrested, and he was convicted and sentenced for twelve years, but was pardoned just before his death. His last words were to assure his wife that he was innocent.

3 CHAMPION BANJOS OF AMERICA HEARD FROM. WE CHALLENGE THE WORLD.

NEW ORLEANS, May 7, 1881.
MESSRS. FAIRBANKS & CO.:
GENTLEMEN: I have examined the two banjos I ordered from you for my lady pupils, Misses Alice and Clara Lande, and it gives me pleasure to state that I can rely upon such gentlemen as you are. I have been dealing with a Philadelphia manufacturer, and they did not turn out as I had anticipated for $30. Your $20 banjos excel his $30 ones, both in finish and tone. And now it still gives me more pleasure to state that the excellent instrument you have sent Mr. John P. Carroll (pupil) cannot be excelled for the amount. I have examined the entire finger board, and find it fretted correctly. I will hereafter advance the sale of your very reasonable instruments. Very respectfully,
ED. DE HARRA,
Artistic Banjoist.

NEW ORLEANS, April 14, 1881.
MESSRS. FAIRBANKS & COLE:
We have received our two banjos, and must say we are very much pleased with them. They are beautiful in TONE as well as in finish. They have also the approbation of Mr. De Barra, who pronounces them perfect. We therefore cheerfully recommend to all who are interested in the banjo to purchase one of Fairbanks & Cole's. Respectfully,
CLARA C. LANDE,
ALICE A. LANDE.

The above are specimens of the large number of testimonials we are constantly receiving, attesting the EXCELLENCE OF OUR BANJOS. We respectfully submit them to the public, and wish to state that we continue to send banjos to all parts of the U. S., C. O. D., WITH PRIVILEGE OF EXAMINATION.
You have only to send a small amount to guarantee good faith, and

WE GUARANTEE SATISFACTION.

Very respectfully, FAIRBANKS & COLE,
MAKERS OF THE CHAMPION BANJOS OF AMERICA.
